MAX BAER'S 'LIFE AND LOVES' BEGINS MONDAY

Today

He Actually Waited About the Big Fight Pleasant Default Day Old Albion Is Shocked

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MR. HITTLER takes his dictatorship and himself seriously. Italy, aghast, reports that he kept Mussolini waiting 20 minutes for luncheon. You can imagine Mussolini's chest swelling more than is usual, his jaw taking on an extra firm, menacing width, as he waited the 20 minutes.

Once Louis the Fourteenth, stepping from his palace just as his coach drove up, exclaimed, full of indignation: "Ou! faillit attendre." "I almost waited."

Mussolini, as powerful in Italy as Louis the Fourteenth ever was in France, actually did wait twenty minutes, twelve hundred seconds of noble rage.

Italians appear not to have given Chancellor Hitler too warm a welcome, and reports of the meeting say that Mussolini found the German chancellor "visionary, dreamy," hard to "pin down to facts."

Mussolini, all to himself and his little group of attendants, has the biggest hotel at the Lido, which is the biggest in Italy. No other guests may register at the hotel while Mussolini is there.

If interested in the heavyweight fighters of yesteryear, learn that Primo Carnera, giant Italian, who lost the world heavyweight championship to Max Baer of California, is ill in bed, far from happy. It was pitiful, reporters said, to see Carnera in his dressing room after the fight, sitting with his face in his huge hands, tears running out between his fingers.

Prizefighters often weep after a fight, and so do other men, suddenly relieved of a great strain.

When John L. Sullivan and Charles Mitchell were locked up in the French jail at Senlis, after their fight under "prize ring rules" on Lord Rothschild's training grounds near Chantilly, both were weeping in separate cells. The jailor had taken away their silk handkerchiefs, "that they may not hang themselves," as he told this writer, who reported that meeting for Charles A. Dana.

Carnera's friends said before the fight, and it was true, that he had been laid up with an attack of influenza and a slight temperature. "Experts," however, say that Max Baer would have beaten Carnera "the best day Carnera ever saw."

Baer, making horrible faces at his adversary one moment, taking on the look of a demon of hatred and malice, laughing and joking the next moment, is as strange a creature as ever entered the prize ring. His victory will help to confirm the well-established theory that among human beings "a mixed breed is the most efficient breed."

Mr. Baer is much mixed, his mother a woman of Scotch-Irish blood, more than six feet tall, from whom he got his powerful body; his father, half Polish Jew, from whom, probably, he got his capacity for "taking punishment" and thinking under difficulties. That thinking the Jewish people possess widely.

Had they not possessed it,

Boy Says He and Friend Drowned Girl, 3

By Associated Press

Cleveland, June 16—A 10-year-old boy's story of drowning Peggy Young, 3, in the Cuyahoga river set Coast Guards to dragging the murky stream today for her body.

A few hours later, the body of Peggy was found floating in the river.

Picked up by police on the street after the girl had been reported missing, Floyd Ranker, Jr., sat calmly in a police car at a precinct station and declared he and a 14-year-old companion were responsible.

"We went to the river," he said to police. "We made her lie down on the cinders close to the river bank. Then we all walked in the river.

"My pal asked Peggy if she could swim. She said she couldn't. Then I pushed her in the water. She came up right away, kicking her arms and legs.

"My pal picked up a half a brick and threw it at her. It hit her in the stomach and she went down and didn't come up any more."

A short time after the boy had told his story last night, the lad he named as his "pal," accompanied by his parents, appeared at a police station and denied any knowledge of the girl's disappearance.

The girl's parents were not told immediately of the drowning story. The mother, Mrs. Nina Young said Peggy and a neighbor child, Betty O'Brien, 5, started out to buy some candy with a penny which Betty's mother had given her.

3 ARRESTED IN GAMBLING RAID

Three men were arrested today when police of the Back Bay station, led by Sergt. Charles F. Eldridge, raided an alleged horse race betting and lottery establishment in the Hotel Buckminster, Kenmore square.

One of those arrested is Henry J. Davis, 48, a resident in the hotel. He was charged with registering bets on a horse race and setting up and promoting a lottery.

The others are Gerado Juotoio, 23, of Saratoga street, East Boston, and Samuel Berger, 31, of Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester. They were charger with being present where gaming instruments were found.

The police officers alleged that they found three telephones in the rooms and several hundred lottery slips.

Police seized 2000 horse play slips and several telegrams written in code and signed by "George T." Police were unable to decipher the telegrams.

The New Champion Picks a New Girl

About the only time that Max Baer is not a "ladies' man" is in the ring. That's probably because the boxing commissioners won't let one of the sweet things sit in his corner. But he rejoins the girls every time before the resin dust has a chance to settle. When he licked Max Schmeling, the California playboy stepped out with Jean Harlow. And at the victory party at the Westchester Bath Club, in Mamoroneck, N. Y., it was Mary Kirk Brown who helped him celebrate Primo Carnera's defeat. She's the latest favorite of the boy who has thrilled more feminine hearts than the two Rudys—Vallee and Valentino—combined. He certainly can pick them. And starting Monday, he'll tell Boston Evening American readers how he does it. (Picture from International News Photo Service.)

Another boy is being sought for questioning.

Wallace Protests Plans for Farms

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Secretary Wallace received powers he said he didn't want and has failed to get authority he wanted badly from Congress.

Wallace said he didn't think the time was ripe for compulsory crop reduction. Congress forthwith slapped a 59 per cent sales tax on all cotton produced over 10,000,000 bales. Wallace is to fix the quotas.

What If Max Picks on Durante Again?

Monday, the Boston Evening American offers to its readers the Real McCoy life story of Maxie Baer, who clubbed Primo Carnera into submission to win the heavyweight title last Thursday night. Under the title, "My life and loves," he will reveal the secrets of his "way with the women." Don't forget this absorbing story of the new champion's heart throbs will start Monday and Maxie says "they are all swell."

By International News Service

Hollywood, Cal., June 16—Beneath the very evident satisfaction which Hollywood's film colony received from Max Baer's victory over Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship of the world today ran an equally evident undercurrent of apprehension.

Remembering, vividly, the activities of Max Baer when he was merely a challenger, the elite of the film colony, and the extras as well, can not help but wonder what will happen when Maxie returns to the field he likes so well a full-fledged champion.

"DON'T TOUCH ME"

One film worker put into words what all the others felt, and said, when he declared:

"Don't quote me on anything concerning Baer. I'll give you the facts but you never can tell how Max will take it and I wouldn't want him to come out here and take a poke at me."

Maybe the actor was recalling the so called friendly feud between Maxie and Jimmy Durante.

It all started one day when Baer walked into the M-G-M studio restaurant and picked the table at which Durante was seated. He walked over, and started to sit

LAWYER TO ASK COURT TO QUASH CHARGES

An attempt to free Norma Brighton Millen without trial will be made Wednesday morning when Attorney George A. Douglas will argue motions which ask that the indictments against her be quashed, dismissed or abated.

Arguments on these motions—which declare Norma to be immune from becoming an accessory after the fact because of her relationship to the Millen brothers—will be the opening gun in the legal battle for her acquittal.

The Rev. Mr. Brighton called on his daughter at the jail this afternoon, and took with him a blue polka-dot dress and a pert white hat which Norma will wear at the trial. She was pleased with her father's taste as far as the dress and hat were concerned, but thought the seven and a half, triple A white shoes were "a little bit long and heavy" on her feet. The shoes will be changed, her father assured her.

Norma was anxious to learn what arrangements her father has been able to make to sit with her during the trial.

"Will the police officers sit around me," her father quoted her as asking.

He assured her that so far as he knew that the state police officers would only be present to handle the crowds that are expected to jam the courthouse for the trial.

Rev. Mr. Brighton told his daughter of the plans he is making to take her to a secluded spot in New Hampshire for a rest if she is acquitted.

Norma will not be forced to sit in the bronze grilled cage where her husband, his brother and Abe Faber sat for eight weeks during their trial. The cage has been dismantled and now rests in the corridor outside the courtroom.

Attorney Douglas today was still awaiting the arrival the specifications promised him by District Attorney Dewing, in compliance with a court order. Dewing has until Monday.

District Attorney Dewing has announced that Norma will face trial on the three indictments. They charge she is an accessory after the fact to the murder of Patrolman Michael A. Maddock and an accessory after the fact to the robbery of the Needham Trust Company.

Astor's Apology Note to Fiancee Revealed

New York, June 16—The Astor-Gillespie feud flared up again today with publication by Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie, socially prominent mother of the pretty debutante who broke her engagement to John Jacob Astor, 3d, of his "letter of apology."

The now famous letter preceded the return to the youth of the $170,000 diamond ring he gave Eileen Gillespie at the time of their engagement.

Irked by Astor's denial that he made the apology, which was demanded by the Gillespies in exchange for return of the ring, Mrs. Gillespie revealed the text of the letter to International News Service. At the same time she issued a brief statement indicating that as far as the Gillespies are concerned, the matter is closed.

Astor had referred to the story of the apology as "bluff" and "filth." The letter made public today by Mrs. Gillespie was dated last Monday. It contained the words "I apologize," but did not reveal the exact cause of the quarrel between the lovers.

Mrs. Gillespie's statement and the text of Astor's letter to Eileen follow:

"In reported interviews to the press, Mr. John Jacob Astor seems to cast some doubt on the quality of his apology. The letter of apology is as follows:

'June 11, 1934.

'Dear Miss Gillespie:

'I willingly withdraw anything I may have said to you in the corridor of the Savoy Plaza Hotel on Sunday, January 21, 1934, which may have hurt you and I apologize.

'I assure you that if I have occasion to speak or write of you or your family it will be only with respect, for as you know, I have always held you in the highest esteem. Sincerely, J. J. Astor.'

"It is not desired that any further discussion on this subject shall ensue."

STAND REVERSED

In revealing the text of the apology, Mrs. Gillespie reversed her stand for the second time in as many days. She previously had declared she "didn't see how any benefit could be derived" from making the letter public.

Explaining her decision to reveal the contents of the famous letter, Mrs. Gillespie told International News Service that Astor "had made statements which put us in a weak position."

Meanwhile, Astor went ahead with plans for his marriage to Miss Ellen Tuck French, Newport debutante, at Newport on June 30. Invitations for the wedding were issued yesterday.

WEDDING JUNE 30

When the wedding is held two weeks from today the Gillespies will not be in Newport, Mrs. Gillespie indicated.

"We may go to Europe in several weeks," she said. "Later, we will go to Newport as usual."

Mrs. Gillespie's decision to reveal the contents of Astor's letter was made suddenly today upon her return from the country and came on the heels of reports that the heir to the Astor millions planned to "bent the Gillespies to the draw" by making the note public himself.

Newport, R. I., June 16—Frank Orman French, blue-blooded ex-taxicab driver and divorced husband of Mrs. Livingston French, will give away his daughter in marriage to John Jacob Astor, 3d, next June 30. This was definitely decided here today when French conferred for some time with his daughter, Ellen Tuck French. The latter has been insistent that her father have this honor, and her mother, although opposed at first, has finally agreed.

French revealed this after the conference. He also said the ceremony would be simple, and that there would be no ushers or attendants for the bride, except the maid of honor, her sister. French came here with Laura Ingalls, famous aviatrix. He is said to be interested in her proposed flight from Australia to Croydon airport in England. They left by plane for Newark airport after the conference.

COURT HOLDS 2; OFFICER HURT

Two men were arraigned in Dorchester court today and a third was being sought on a John Doe warrant after they had beaten two officers by and sent the policeman who arrested them to City Hospital with a possible knee fracture.

They were arrested by Patrolman Clarence Strange, 42, of 38 Myrtlebank avenue, Dorchester, after they had clubbed William Morgan, 23, of Minot Park, Dorchester, and Ralph Brown of Oak road, Milton.

Father of Dry Law Moves for Repeal

Washington, June 16—Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, introduced a resolution to repeal the 21st amendment to the Constitution, which scrapped national prohibition.

Sheppard, life-long dry advocate and "father" of the 18th amendment, suggested instead a more flexible amendment which would give the government power to regulate the liquor business, but not make it compulsory.

Slayers of Boston Missionary Hunted

Peiping, China, June 16—Chinese troops, aided by villagers anxious to earn a reward of 1000 silver dollars offered by the government, scoured the countryside today in search of the bandits who killed Dr. J. H. Ingram, elderly American missionary, formerly of Boston, Mass., Thursday night.

'HANFY' LANDS AS ANTI NAZIS GATHER

With hundreds of foes of the Hitler regime mobilizing at the North river pier of the North German Lloyd, in New York, Ernst Hanfstaengl, former foreign press chief, arrived at Quarantine shortly after noon today aboard the express liner Europa.

Two New York police launches were ordered down the Bay to escort the North Atlantic speed queen to her dock as a precaution against the threatened hostile demonstrations against the unofficial Nazi envoy who is on the way to his 25th class reunion at Harvard.

The entire Radical Squad was rushed to the pier, where more than 100 patrolmen—half of them mounted—and 30 detectives were already on duty. An area extending a block on each side of the structure was roped off and cleared of all persons except those who could prove they had business at the ship's side.

Virtually every foe of Germany's Nazi regime assured the New York police that there would be a reception on the pier for "Putzy"—a large and unfriendly reception—when the Europa docks late this afternoon.n

And the anti-Hanfstaengl demonstrations are to continue throughout his stay in Cambridge, too, it was indicated. As a result federal secret service men and New York, Boston and Cambridge police—at least 250 of them—were being massed to provide a bodyguard for the returning Harvard alumnus.

Hanfstaengl resigned from the New York Harvard Club shortly before America's entrance into the war after a stormy session in which he charged other members of violating American neutrality. He did not return to Germany until 1921, and fell in with Hitler the next year, he said.

He plans to leave New York for Cambridge immediately after his arrival, he said.

A guard of Secret Service men, State troopers and Cambridge police, supplemented by "yard cops," has already been assigned to the freshman dormitory that will house Hanfstaengl in Cambridge.

Harvard officials expected him to be on hand for the registration of the 25-year class in the Union at Harvard and Quincy streets—opposite the home of President James Bryant Conant, on Monday afternoon.

2 Badly Burned by Blast of Alcohol

Haverhill, June 16—Two men were badly burned today when a bootleg drum of alcohol exploded in the plant of the White Line Specialty Company in Nettleton avenue.

Ralph Hoyt, 30, of Nettleton avenue, who was drawing alcohol from the drum when it exploded, suffered third degree burns of the face. He was rushed to Gale Hospital where his condition is critical.

His employer, Edward Smith, also of Nettleton avenue, suffered burns of the back and arms in rescuing Hoyt. He was treated by a physician and sent home.

Mother Wins Child

Mrs. Harold F. Allen, of Gloucester, who charged that her estranged husband kidnaped their child last May, was granted official custody of her 16 months old child, Sandra June Allen, in Salem court. The court ordered the father to bring the child into court and then turned it over to the mother. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Knight, father of the youth.

As added features of the afternoon's entertainment, John and Herbert Slezinger, 15 year old twins and members of the Secret Agent X-9 Club, sang, accompanied on the piano by Miss Ruth Hanson.

HOUSING, LOAN BILLS WIND UP CONGRESS

By Associated Press

Washington, June 16—Adjournment of the first Roosevelt Congress tonight became a practical certainty with fast action on the housing and labor bills.

The House adopted the resolution for a presidential board to handle collective bargaining disputes. Not even a record vote was required.

The Senate voted overwhelmingly for the bill that will promote private lending for home construction and repair. Some slight amendments necessitated a conference with the House, however, before it could be sent to the White House.

WAGNER EXPLAINS BILL

Senator Wagner (D, N.Y.) explained the new labor resolution to his colleagues. It was generally accepted that adoption would soon follow, after which no major obstacle to adjournment would exist.

Chairman Connery (D-Mass.) of the labor committee said the American Federation of Labor had preferred the original Wagner bill, but would accept the modification.

NEW STEEL PARLEY

President Roosevelt today agreed to receive a delegation of union leaders at the White House Monday and discuss with them proposals for a settlement of strife in the steel industry.

A steel strike, scheduled for today, was averted by union labor leaders meeting in Pittsburgh, Pa.

MOTHER WINS FIGHT FOR BABY

Golden crowned, cooing, blue-eyed Sandra June Allen, 16-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Allen of Gloucester, was snugly clasped in her mother's arms today which ended the dramatic Salem court procedure concerning the baby's whereabouts.

The 23-year-old mother, Mrs. Eleanor L. Allen, secured positive custody of the child under order of Judge Harry E. Dow, Salem probate court, after the father was forced to bring the child into court on a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Dow ordered the child placed in custody of the mother after a conference between Judge John J. Burke, Gloucester, counsel for the wife, and Attorney James J. Gaffney, the husband's counsel, and after the court was officially notified by Deputy Sheriff Robert C. Clark of Gloucester that the habeas corpus writ had finally been served.

Washington, June 16—While Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, the President's only daughter, was speeding en route to Reno to join the divorce colony there, Washington society and newspaper circles were alive with reports that she will marry a young Washington newspaperman as soon as she gets her divorce from Curtis Dall, New York broker.

EACH FOR SELF

Mrs. Dall's marital difficulties and the fact that she has gone to Nevada to establish a residence preparatory to bringing suit for divorce has caused grief to the President, it was learned.

It is understood that the move was made against the wishes of the President, but that he was won over by the pleadings of Mrs. Roosevelt for their daughter's happiness.

It was pointed out that Mrs. Dall made her decision to seek a divorce in line with a Roosevelt tradition that each member of the family is master of his or her own destiny in life.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt confirmed reports that Mrs. Dall is Nevada bound. More than this the First Lady would not say.

DROPS WEDDING RING

Mrs. Dall has not been wearing a wedding ring for some time. She is nine years younger than her husband. She left Thursday with her two children, Anna Eleanor Dall (Sistie), aged 6, and Curtis (Buzzie) aged 3, for Lake Tahoe, fashionable resort near Reno, where she has rented a cottage for the summer.

Mrs. Dall Confirms Plans for Divorce

Omaha, Neb., June 16—Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the President, sped today toward Reno and a divorce.

In an exclusive interview on her train, the blond matron who has been a resident of the White House with her father and mother, confirmed reports that the primary purpose of her journey was to begin proceedings against her broker-husband, Curtis B. Dall.

"I can't say positively that I'm going to get a divorce," she said. "Many things might arise. I don't believe any woman can say such a thing definitely."

Reticent to discuss her personal affairs, Mrs. Dall had secluded herself in a compartment with her two children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie," and a negro maid.

'BUZZIE' ILL WITH COLD

"Buzzie" is ill with a cold, she said, and she had spent an almost sleepless night watching over him en route from Washington to Chicago.

Mrs. Dall has leased a home near Lake Tahoe, she said, through an agent and plans to establish residence in Nevada. She has not retained an attorney, she said.

In her discussion, she compared her situation to that of her brother, Elliott, who was divorced last July at Minden, Nev., and married Miss Ruth Googins of Fort Worth, Tex., less than two weeks later at Burlington, Ia.

"The President's daughter has seen her husband only a few times in calls at the White House since their separation more than a year ago, she said.

She declined to comment on the nature of the charges which might be made in the prospective divorce action.

Ayer Man Injured in Auto Collision

Bernard J. McQuaid of 90 Pleasant street, Ayer, was injured this afternoon when the car he was driving collided with another passenger car, operated by Patrick Keough of Main street, Somerville, at the junction of Broadway and Columbia street, Cambridge.

The impact was such that the car McQuaid was driving turned over twice. McQuaid was taken to the home of friends on Highland avenue, Cambridge.

WOMAN DODGES POISON DEATH

A telephone call today cheated a Gloucester patrolman, with a good memory for automobile registration numbers, of the credit for saving a woman from taking poisoned medicine.

The search was started by a Chicago physician who realized that there had been a mistake in a prescription and asked the police to warn her.

Police radio and teletype carried a description of the car in which she was driving with Arnold Schenken, of 25 Oakwood avenue, Glen Ridge, N. J., to every village and town in New England.

Patrolman Eugene Alvis, of Gloucester, recognized the New Jersey plates—I-E-45-507—today. He told the woman of her peril.

"Thank you very much," she said. "I called my home yesterday to let the folks know where to send my mail, and they told me about the mistake in the prescription."

Have you noticed the total disappearance of the word "charity" during the past year or so? The dark horse Relief has moved into first place, but even that isn't permanent. Certainly it is not as permanent as Need. The race, at the moment is between Dividend (out of Dole, by Douglas) and Taxes. Taxes has the inner track, but the crowd doesn't like him.

The most impressive thing in this connection was Mayor LaGuardia's recent remark that America has been treating relief as a temporary problem for several years and it isn't a temporary problem, the need of the unemployed could have been met by charity. You gave an honest-looking beggar fifteen cents, in 1928, assuming that he'd get a cup of coffee and take a street car to some place where a job was open.

You may have been wrong. The man may have been a panhandler with no desire for a job; or, it was more than possible, no job existed. But for yourself, the giver of charity, the transaction ended there. Jobs would eventually be found for everyone except the few misfits of an industrial system which was otherwise perfect.

Three years later, in 1931, you gave not fifteen cents, but fifteen or fifteen hundred dollars, because the number of "misfits" had grown to ten or twelve millions. By 1932, with more than 15 million men out of work, it became ridiculous to imagine that private charity could even keep them alive. As for jobs—who could make them?

In 1934 the Government of the United States is in the business of relief. It carries on no great drive for private charity. Instead, in a roundabout way, it redistributes not only existing wealth, but the wealth of the future. Your private duty to give to the poor is engulfed in your public duty to pay taxes, a duty you will hand down to your children, and they to theirs.

It am not suggesting that there isn't work enough for everyone in America. My point is that while we could put 30 or 40 million people to work, we would be wasting energy and time and wealth if we did. Much better to limit the number of workers, or rotate the workers, so that everyone worked perhaps three months a year. After all, we get about 92 workless days a year now; there is nothing illegal or immoral in extending our leisure days to about 200.

That is, however, an economic problem. The personal problem which we all have to meet introduces two new elements into our lives:

First, we are no longer responsible for the wreckage of our industrial system, because

Second, the Government has assumed the obligation of taking care of all those citizens who cannot be taken care of in industry.

Neither of these things are completely accomplished facts at the present moment; both are coming to pass. The second, especially, is part of the greatest revolution the world has ever seen. It is a revolution in thought; if it succeeds, it will prevent a revolution in action.

LIFE SPARED, THORP FAINTS IN CELL

When Fame and Wealth Steppe dUp to the Altar Together

Two of the most important names in Boston's Blue Book were joined today in the marriage of Miss Margaret Stockton, daughter of Philip Stockton, president of the First National Bank, to Charles Francis Adams, Jr., son of President Hoover's secretary of the navy. The wedding was in St. John's Episcopal church, Beverly. (Picture by American staff photographer.)

MOTHER SOBS WITH JOY AT TIDINGS

By JAMES F. McENANEY
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Concord, N. H., June 16—Trustles tore down an ominous scaffold here today.

A tired governor slept late. An unnamed hangman went without a job and—

Sydney Thorp turned to a life behind prison bars.

At Biddeford, Me., his gray-haired mother wept tears of joy. His brother and sister rejoiced with her.

At Portsmouth the widow and daughter of the man a jury decided he slew were surprised to learn that he still lived.

And two officials, witnesses to an execution that didn't take place were disappointed "because they came all the way from Portsmouth and they didn't hang him."

These were the highlights today on the last minute moves that saved Sydney Thorp from death on the end of a brand new linen rope. Thorp was within 90 minutes of eternity when word came from Governor John C. Winant that the life of the 29-year-old Biddeford man was saved.

Thorp was due to hang for the murder of Joseph Trudeau, aged Portsmouth baker. In March, 1933, a jury in superior court at Portsmouth ruled that he had stalked the baker after he had seen a roll of bills displayed. The baker was later found beaten and robbed on the floor of his bakery.

News of her son's new lease on life reached Mrs. Eleanor Thorp from the lips of Michael Toomey, staff correspondent for the Boston Evening American at Biddeford, Maine.

"Thank God! Thank God! Thank God!" said the aged mother.

Recovering her composure, Mrs. Thorp asked that the members of Governor Winant's council who voted for commutation be publicly thanked through the columns of the Boston Evening American.

"They stood by Sydney and me in our hour of trouble. I don't know what to say now. Say anything you want, only thank your editors and all the people who have brought this terrible thing to public view."

R. L. LONG WEDS MISS GOGLIA

The marriage of Miss Mary Susan Goglia, East Boston, to Robert L. Long, son of Park Commissioner William P. Long, of 44 Tower street, Jamaica Plain, was held this morning at the Sacred Heart Church, East Boston. The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's brother, the Rev. William A. Long. The maid of honor was Miss Josephine Esmano, while the bride's brother, Ernest Goglia, acted as best man.

The bride was dressed in ivory satin and carried a cluster of sweet peas and gardenias. After a honeymoon through the Green Mountains and Canada, the couple will make their home in Jamaica Plain.

Long is a graduate of the class of 1932 of Holy Cross, where he was a football star. In 1931 he was awarded the hero medal of the Massachusetts Humane Society for his gallant rescue of a 15-year-old boy from the Fens River.

NEW YORK

DAY BY DAY

O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 16—A Manhattan summer evening, embering its final glow, has a deathbed loveliness that few cities attain. All the tall midtown spires are benisoned in sleepy golden shimmer. A sorcery of spangles and sudden hush in a reeling world of realities.

Even the vesperal bells have a far-away loneliness and Fifth avenue itself becomes tip-toey. Broadway for an hour or so sleepwalks in a sort of drugged reverie. Such naive memoranda was filed away this sundown in a leisurely walk from the park with Karl Kitchen.

No one can help loving this lunatic city when it suddenly sheds harshness and becomes so soft. It is between 5 and 7 p. m., I imagine, that rough drafts of odes and orisons to the metropolis are dashed off. In the studios stubborn blobs of paint melt into radiation.

The most exquisite canvases of the city are those imprisoning the final shadows of a closing day, catching the calm that's the cyclone's vortex. A New York evening is always a rebuke to the greedy, lustful farce of the daylight hours. I'm glad, somehow, I sleep through the mornings.

Ewing Galloway and I watched him talking to an attractive girl on Helen Gould's 5th avenue corner, puffing at his pipe. At intervals she casually took the pipe from his mouth and took a few puffs, too. Then he went on his way; she, her's. But after a few steps he turned and called to her. She had forgotten to return his pipe.

Every man at some time or other nurtures a secret yen to swagger about in a rakish Panama with both a front and back dip. But only a few rise to the occasion. The most accomplished wearers that come to mind are Larry Waterbury, William Gaxton, Gary Cooper, John Barrymore, Clark Gable and, of course, Jimmy Walker who, with Warner Baxter, comprise America's grandest pair of chapeau tilters.

The Colony, if gourmets are accurate, tilts the tariff higher than any other city restaurant. The folded menus and the wine man, looped grandly with a brass chain like a Lord Mayor, suggest the lost but noble squat, brick Volain on a rue Cambon corner. The Colony entrees shade upward from $2. Desserts from 50 to 75 cents. Food is good enough, the room intimately sedate and orchestraless. It haloes a mannered elegance. Subtly, indeed, its restraint makes everyone conspicuous. And that, messieures et mesdames, is a restaurant's crowning attainment. In bigger, noisier places, they employ a master of ceremony pest to achieve the same effect.

In a glorified honky-tonk a hop skip from Broadway a nudist bar frescoes its walls with various people of some importance and no importance at all, caricatured in cut out wood au naturel. I'm grouped among the Broadway columnists. It is not important but I'm not, and never have been, one of the guild. And to stick one's face thus in a public place, without permission, is typically Broadway.

My sleepless nights are far apart and their genesis is usually in some triviality the average person would not notice. I spent last night in the wide-eyed manner of the goldfish because in a slow-down of motor traffic in Brooklyn I happened to glance up at an apartment house. On a seventh floor sill of an open window was a child not more than four, all alone, playing with some toy.

I ran into Jack Dempsey and Hannah Williams the other evening, sitting dreamily in a cafe corner and I suspect holding hands. The modern troglodyte mooning and desperately in love would be something for a George Bellows' canvas. Dempsey told me of the expected accouchement. "I hope," I told Miss Williams, "it will be another Jack Dempsey." She beamed: "And don't I!"

Curley in Primary by 3 to 1, Is McGlue Forecast

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Prediction that James M. Curley, former mayor of Boston, would defeat General Charles H. Cole by three to one at the September primary, was made today by Charles H. McGlue, one of Curley's chief campaign workers. General Cole won the endorsement of the Democratic pre-primary convention.

McGlue backed up his prediction with interesting figures. At the same time Curley was denying a report that he plans to put a complete slate in the field against the convention's choices.

FIGURES BACK CLAIMS

"There are 167,000 enrolled Democratic voters in Boston, where Curley's greatest strength lies," said McGlue. Worcester is the second largest city, and two-thirds of the delegates from that city were for Curley. Mayor John C. Mahoney of Worcester and his friends are dissatisfied. They wanted Mahoney for lieutenant-governor, and he did not like the switch of Hurley delegates to Cole. Mayor Mahoney was for Hurley for Governor.

"Springfield is the third largest city. There was a big block of Curley delegates from there.

"Of the 216 towns in the state, 315 had delegates at the Democratic convention. About half the delegates were from towns. But on election day most of those towns are Republican. The Democratic vote of the towns is negligible. So the fight is only just begun."

CURLEY DENIES REPORT

Ex-Mayor Curley declared that the report he plans to put a complete "Curley slate" in the field for the primaries was circulated to embarrass him.

McGlue pointed out that Dr. Sanctuosus, the convention's choice for secretary of state, is a Curley friend. Thomas H. Buckley, choice for auditor, did nothing to oppose Curley. The other admittedly were Ely-Walsh men.

"I am going directly to the voters," said Curley today. "I am appealing from the verdict of a packed jury. I will place my candidacy before the electorate, the only qualified and proper jury, knowing that this time I will get fair play.

"With the assistance of every thoughtful working man ad woman of Democratic affiliation, I will smash the machine which for so long has dominated our party here."

Garrity Recounts "Cracker Dont's"

Bunker Hill Day celebration "don'ts" were today emphasized by State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity. The principal ones were: "Don't hold firecrackers in your hand." "Don't throw firecrackers into combustible materials." "Don't throw firecrackers into passing automobiles." "Don't throw firecrackers promiscuously."

The quartet gave their names as Julian A. Ripley, Mrs. Barbara Walker Ripley, and two brothers, Charles V. Brooks and Oliver Brooks, of Westport, Conn.

They are charged with bathing unattired, bathing in a water supply and trespass. Treating the matter as a great joke, according to police, the group furnished bail of $50 each for their appearance in Hamden town court Monday.

Will King Baer Renew His Friendly Durante Feud?

down, meanwhile smiled around the room, at the actresses—stars and extras.

OLD CHAIR STUNT

While he was thus engaged, Durante pulled away the chair Baer intended to use for a parking space.

Baer dropped for the space where the chair had been. He hit the floor.

He laughed—just as he must have laughed at Carnera—and stood up. He looked at Jimmy and without ceremony picked up the comedian and hooked him over the Baer shoulder, schnozzle and all. Then started a march to the entrance, where without ceremony and none too gently he dumped the surprised Durante on the ground.

It started a feud. Durante was just as game as Carnera. Every day at noon the chair was pulled out. Every day at noon Baer hit the floor and just as surely Durante got his shoulder ride to the door and then—dump.

Rules and regulations evidently meant nothing to Baer, if they concerned something he wanted to do.

Thank heavens," another film executive said, "there weren't many of our rules that he cared to violate."

This man then went on to tell of the day that Mrs. Baer's little boy Maxie got the yen to watch the great, and aloof Greta Garbo at work.

CRASHES GARBO SET

Now there are strict orders that no one goes on the Garbo sets when the actress herself is there, except those immediately concerned. That didn't matter to Maxie. He crashed the gate, anyway.

He walked onto the set. He picked a chair and sat down.

Nobody noticed him, or if they did, they didn't order him away.

Garbo, making the picture "Queen Christina," paid no more attention to the challenger than if the chair had been empty.

That wasn't any fun so Max rose and ambled away.

Hollywood has linked Baer's name with well known stars. Jean Harlow has been mentioned in the same breath with the new champ, but she quickly squelched the rumor.

Then too there was the name of Myrna Loy, who played the lead opposite Max in the picture, "Prizefighter and the Lady."

MUSSOLINI AND HITLER PLEDGE AUSTRO PEACE

By International News Service

Munich, June 16 — Chancellor Adolf Hitler landed here at 10 a. m. today, after a flight from Venice, Italy, where he conferred with Premier Mussolini.

It was reported Hitler had invited Mussolini to visit Germany in the near future.

Premier Mussolini saw Hitler off at Venice.

By Associated Press

Venice, June 16 — Adolf Hitler, manifestly satisfied with results of his two-day conference with Europe's other leading dictator, Benito Mussolini, left by plane early today for Germany.

Observers listed results of their conversations as follows:

1—Austria, despite Nazi leanings, must remain an independent nation, one of Italy's primary aims. In return, Mussolini agreed to "lay off" if a Nazi were elected chancellor of Austria.

2—Official sources said no definite agreement was reached as to disarmament, although the primary object of the meeting was presumably for Mussolini to induce Germany to return to the League of Nations and the Disarmament Conference.

3—Germany will be invited to join the Italo-Austro-Hungarian economic accord, a move designed to promote peace in Central Europe.

4—Conversations, an Italian spokesman said, opposed regional blocs in favor of general co-operation.

PHOTOS BRAND SUSPECT

Witnesses today viewed pictures of Victor DiMatteo, held for the grand jury in Providence on an armed robbery charge, and, according to police, identified him as one of the men involved in the holdup of the Dorchester office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company last April.

Patrolman Patrick Reed, who with Harry Rubenstein, agent of the company, was wounded in the holdup, identified DiMatteo. Several storekeepers in the neighborhood also viewed the photographs and identified DiMatteo, police said.

The prisoner is being held without bail in Providence, in connection with the armed robbery of a market last June 11. Three men took part in the robbery and obtained $1874.

Woodman, retired millionaire shoe manufacturer.

The police here cabled Liverpool authorities to watch the S. S. Laconia when it arrives in that city on Monday. It is believed that Marsden, his wife and two children are aboard the liner. The warrant was issued in district court here today on complaint of William H. Merrill, of Gage street, Methuen, superintendent of the Woodman properties here.

Women Cleared In Freakish Car Crash

Miss Nancy E. Hickey, of Fountain street, Newton, and Mrs. Gertrude E. Lewis, of Lincoln parkway, Somerville, were each found not guilty today in municipal court on charges of dangerous driving in connection with the death of John P. McMahon, Appleton street, South End.

Police said Mrs. Hickey's car knocked down McMahon. A second car, driven by Mrs. Lewis, proceeding slowly, ran over the man's body, police said.

Witnesses in Miss Hickey's car said they heard a bump and backed up, but another car passed them. When they reached the spot where they felt the bump, there was nothing there, they said. Judge Adlow dismissed the defendants. McMahon died the next day.

they would have all been killed during the Middle Ages and two thousand years of persecution before and after the Middle Ages.

To do justice to the races assembled in Baer's blood and brain, it would perhaps be fair to say that his Irish-Scotch mother supplied the physical strength that sent Carnera to the floor at the beginning of the first round, while his 25 per cent of Jewish blood did the planning and thinking that kept him constantly, as reporters said, "pounding Carnera just under the heart."

Yesterday was "default day" in Europe. Following France and England, Italy, Hungary, Poland, Latvia, Roumania and Esthonia, with more or less convincing excuses, notified Uncle Sam in diplomatic language: "Sorry, nothing doing in the way of payment."

How silly our "incubator baby" statesmen were when they lent ten thousand millions to Europe, expecting to get it back, is shown in figures.

Europe was legally and in honor bound to pay the United States today, on account of war debts, a total sum of $477,843,-644.45. And all that Uncle Sam will get will be $166,538 from little Finland, perhaps poorest of all the countries, but possessing the extraordinary peculiarity of honesty.

Our English friends, welching as cheerfully as ever did a bookmaker in a loud checked suit on Derby Day, utter indignant moans when Germany announces a six months' moratorium, and London expects Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer, to urge the bludgeoning of German trade balances."

That might suggest an idea to this country. Our British, French, Italian and other friends must have considerable balances of various sorts here, including quantities of "earmarked" gold. We might, but probably shall not, borrow Neville Chamberlain's idea. In statesmanship, ours seems to be a turn-the-other-cheek country, with a habit of taking things in a recumbent position.

More bombs sent in Paris, presumably by a maniac, who signs "The Three Judges of Hell," the latest add, faced to Citroen, motor important French automobile maker. It was opened by his secretary, whose hands were severely torn.

French detectives, famous throughout the world, are not to be criticized for their inability, thus far, to capture the supposed maniac, whose only motive appears to be hatred of the French people.

Where there is no definite motive for crime detection is difficult.

Many foreign countries show a disposition to settle political questions with bullets or bombs. Even in England, usually free from violence, followers of Mosley, leader of a small band of British Fascists, declare that Communists planned to murder him. In Poland, the minister of the interior, Bronislav Pieracki, shot three times yesterday, will die.

In this country, usually content to talk about politics without shooting, we must not boast, since we have had three Presidents murdered, Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, and attempts, that happily failed, to shoot both the Roosevelt Presidents.

The only good news of the threatening dangerous steel strike comes from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Wisely conservative, he knows it would be harmful, as prosperity starts coming back, to rip the country wide open with a disastrous strike, or put organized labor in the position of defying the government and flouting its effort to restore prosperity.

He advises against a strike, suggesting a board of three, to be appointed by the President, to mediate, conciliate and insure collective bargaining.

Mother Love Prompts Her to Abandon Baby

A sacrifice of which mother love alone is capable led to the abandonment of pretty, blue-eyed, three-year-old Godina Naramore in the North Station.

This was revealed today as Mrs. Frances Naramore, 22, mother of the child, opened her heart to police in Belfast, Me., where she was arrested shortly after noon for Boston police on a charge of abandonment of the child.

Meanwhile the little one played smilingly in the Chardon street home, unaware of the problem that had beset her mother.

Brokenly, police said, Mrs. Naramore revealed her heartbreak and how she felt compelled to leave the child, that someone more able might provide it a better home than she could.

"I was up against it," police said she told them. "I left my husband. He's in Boston somewhere but I don't know how to reach him. I only had $1. I figured that if I left Godina in the station someone would find her and be good to her.

"I thought they might find a good home for her somewhere. I did my best but I couldn't give her the home and things she should have. I loved her and I didn't want to leave her but I didn't know what to do."

Belfast police expressed sympathy, but explained Boston police had requested her arrest. She seemed unconcerned. Special Officer Hazen Chalmers of the North street station is en route to bring Mrs. Naramore to Boston.

The child was abandoned in North station Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Naramore, who lives in Croft street, Belfast, had come here Wednesday and asked the Traveler's Aid Society for help. She had only $1.

They provided lodging for the night in a Myrtle street house. She went back to Belfast Thursday.

IT'S A PLEASURE TO TELL YOU!

Filming an important novel like "The Thin Man" is a privilege and honor! M-G-M did it with gay excitement, mixing each hair-raising thrill with fun and frolic. A prediction: we think you'll describe it as "the best movie of the season!"

Dorothy confessed a murder. Did she lie? Did some one force open Julia's clenched hand! Why did the Morelli gang appear? Nick Charles kept smiling ... so did his pretty wife ... but weren't they worried!

Because Alexander Woollcott, Sinclair Lewis and others picked "The Thin Man" as their favorite mystery novel, M-G-M did its best to make a great picture of it. You'll judge the happy results!

BRITISH STEEL PLANTS RUN AT FULL BLAST

Editor's Notes: British steel mills give positive evidence that recovery is on the way in Great Britain, H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service correspondent, writes in the sixth article of his series on British recovery.

Sheffield, Eng., June 16—Red snakes a quarter of a mile long, diving down a runway at 25 miles an hour show the speed of British recovery in Sheffield. These snakes are flat ones, like ribbons.

Next door another red snake shoots past the workmen at 50 miles an hour. This one is round like a rod. This one goes so fast that if it broke, large coils of cherry red steel would pile in twisted knots before the machinery could be stopped. So the workmen all wear armor of netting.

The snakes are the band and wire steel coming out of the mills of the United Steel Companies, Ltd., plant. The mills are running at capacity. 20 hours a week all they are behind in filling orders.

MORE THAN RECOVERY

British steel is not merely recovering. British steel is booming. Steel is the heart of industry. Our age is named after it. Steel is used in every manufacture. When the heart of industry is beating strongly, industry is healthy. British steel works are producing today more steel than ever in their history.

Automatized, down to the last detail this vast plant, a quarter of a mile long, houses machines that do the work of thousands of men. The process starts in the immense shed where 14 50-tone open hearth furnaces are blazing incandescent. They are all going full blast.

Down in the yards mountainous piles of pig-iron and countless railroad cars full of scrap iron yield to a giant magnet. It reaches down and lovingly clings to half a ton of scrap. Much of this scrap has come from Germany and America. So fast has British steel gone ahead that Britain scrap can cut.

QUARTER-MILE LONG

Belts and rollers throughout the entire quarter-mile length of the shop carry the steel this way and that, until in an incredibly short time the finished product, just a while ago pig iron and scrap, is delivered automatically to the railroad cars.

British steel can make a comeback because in the first year the British government put a 33 1-3 per cent duty on imported steel. Before the tariff British steel imported 3,000,000 tons of steel yearly. Now, but slightly more than Britain's plants cannot keep up with the home consumption, the import is still, but only 1,000,000 tons. The government has just announced that the tariff, due to expire in October, is to be continued indefinitely.

The steel tariff directly increased the demand for British steel. The general tariff of 10 per cent ad valorem imposed in 1932 on virtually all imports, boosted later to an average of at least 30 per cent on most articles, indirectly increased the demand for British steel by increasing the manufacture in Britain of all the variety of goods requiring steel as a raw material.

The upshot has been that in the first four months of this year 3,000,000 tons of steel produced, up 1,000,000 tons over 1933. The production figures are heading to pass the record of 9,638,000 tons in 1929, greatest steel year Britain ever had.

Sarah Wambaugh Gets League Post

Geneva, June 16 (AP)—Miss Sarah Wambaugh of Cambridge, Mass., today was appointed by the League of Nations as an alternate member of the commission which will supervise the plebiscite to be held in the Saar Basin next year, by which the inhabitants of that important industrial region will determine whether they shall become French, German, or remain under the control of the League.

Miss Wambaugh was named with the understanding that she will replace any member of the commission who may be prevented from attending to his duties on the body. The commission includes Victor Henry of Switzerland and Alan Rhode of Sweden.

Taxi Driver Freed in Girl's Death

Robert H. Pattow, of 13 Rochester street, South End, a taxi cab driver, was found not guilty today by Judge Adlow in municipal court of manslaughter in connection with the death last Monday night in Charles street of a 10-year-old girl.

Police claimed Pattow was traveling at a high rate of speed on Charles street between Allen and Poplar streets when his taxi cab struck Mary Marshall, 10, of 81 Brighton street, West End. Judge Adlow, however, imposed a $100 fine for dangerous driving.

Baby Girl Hit by Auto in Allston

Louise Grace, 3, of Euston street, Allston, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital after she had been struck by a sedan driven by Charles Carlson of Brookline avenue, at Harvard avenue and Farrington street, Brighton.

Carlson was making a left turn on Harvard avenue when the girl stepped out into the street. At the hospital she was treated for lacerations of the left knee.

FERNS AND WHITE PEONIES DECORATED

St. Johns Episcopal Church in Beverly Farms at noon today, for the marriage of Miss Margaret Stockton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stockton, to Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams of Boston. Bishop Lawrence, Dr. William G. Thayer and Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, rector of the church, officiated at the service and Mr. Stockton gave his daughter's hand in marriage . . .

ISABELLA GARDNER

Soft white chiffon ending, in a train of tiny ruffles, fashioned the bride's gown with which she wore a tulle veil falling from a small coronet of orange blossoms encircling her head. Bouvardia and gypsophelia were combined in a feathery bouquet.

Mrs. Alvah Crocker (Nancy Ladd) of Brookline preceded the bride to the altar as matron of honor. Her gown of larkspur blue organza was be worn with a matching blue hat and an arm bouquet of larkspur and gypsophelia.

The bride's father is the president of the First National Bank of Boston. The bridegroom is the son of the former Secretary of the Navy, and is a direct descendant of two Presidents, being the great-great-grandson of John Quincy Adams.

gypsophelia.

In white organza with matching hats, larkspur blue sashes, and slippers, and carrying large armuls of larkspur, the six presented a beautiful picture. They were Miss Marion Clark, Miss Hortense Clark, Miss Anne Tuckerman, Miss Jeanne Millet of New York, Miss Isabella Gardner, Miss Eleanor Stockton Shaw, Miss Nancy Whitman and Miss Susanna Shaw Minturn, the latter four, sister debutantes of the bride last winter.

Large Staff of Ushers

THE GROOM'S BROTHER-IN-LAW, Henry S. Morgan, came over from Gotham to perform best man duties and there was a large usher staff. In the latter group were Mr. Alvah Crocker, Mr. John S. Ames, Jr., Mr. Charles Devens, Mr. Charles H. Stockton, Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald and Mr. Ephron Claflin, 3d, both of New York, Mr. George C. Homans, Mr. Alexander Cochrane Forbes, Mr. William S. Patten and Mr. Joseph W. Alsop, Jr., the latter two, New Yorkers.

Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the Manchester home of the Stocktons.

The bride's mother attended the wedding gowned in a crepe dress of pastel green, the same shade of green to be found in the trimming of her natural straw hat.

After graduating from the Winsor School and Miss Hall's School, the bride made her debut last fall and was elected to membership in the Junior League and Vincent Club . . .

Mr. Adams graduated in 1932 from Harvard and has just completed his course at the Harvard Business School . . . His clubs include the Tennis and Racquet, the Eastern Yacht Club and A. D. . . . His father is a former Secretary of the Navy and one of the leading yachtsmen of the country . . .

Fete at Moseley's-on-the-Charles

AT ONE OF THE MOST SURPRISING and successful parties of the season a group of post-debs and their Favored Ones made merry at Moseley's-on-the-Charles last evening . . . The occasion was a flannel-foot frolic and most of them navigated without getting too much entangled, one way or another . . .

Catherine, the Great (Blake), in convict stripes and shorts, laid down the laws and took in the dwindling dollars with the aid of Dodo (the by-no-means-extinct Dean of sport) . . . She was in yellow sweater and navy slacks, a most becoming rig . . .

We had the pleasure of meeting Henry, the Eighth, Russelling about giving his queens a time . . . He did his duty and a bit more . . . We even noticed him paying marked attention to a rather elderly lady.

Bebe of Inscrutable Smile

AMONG THE PRINCES WAS HALDIS, with Bebe of the inscrutable smile . . . Beale-V it or not . . . And Priscilla who makes her Johns speak for themselves . . .

In a Hall of Jeans was Jean Hall, different in duck suit and sneakers . . . Jean is a very ducky gal and the ganders didn't allow her to sit out one dance . . .

Lindy Watson

The kiddie car race was indescribable . . . there was very little, if anything, left of them at the finish of the gruelling pace . . . Instead of being sent to the hospital for children, they will have to be put in for repairs . . . Arkie de Rosset and Bob Henderson pedaled their way to champagne and victory.

Champagne to Eleo Stevenson, too, for her long curls and to the man on the flying trapeze in nightie and nursing bottle . . . Name unknown . . .

The swains were making fast friends with Lucille Swift . . . cunning in kiddie costume . . . and pretty Lindy Watson appeared as Little Miss Marker, too, too adorable in baby blue . . .

Mysterious Tall Fair Thing

PLAY FOR ME, GYPSY, was our Big Moment . . . the boys were enjoying the fun as much as the subscribers; it was very informal and rough-house, a regular kids' party as they announced.

Felice Leeds and a tall good-looking won the elimination waltz . . . Felice was a bewitching gypsy in full skirt and long black tresses . . .

Among the mysterious was a tall, blonde Fair Thing in black satin evening gown and not a whit self-conscious . . . Hal Binney always manages to find himself with a mystery, and like it.

Like a rustle of spring, Louise Russell was exciting in blue corduroy slacks, dark and lovely . . . And Margy Emerson was hill-billy enchantress in plaid shirt and overalls . . . Nice party!

Pops Season Successful

By MOSES SMITH

THE POPS concerts, under Arthur Fiedler, go their popular and prosperous way without visible disturbance. The vogue of Mr. Fiedler, in fact, seems to be on the rize, for by all prospects the present season will be the most successful in the history of the Pops.

The program for next week, consisting of an artful blend of popular favorites with selections from the symphonic repertoire, are typical in explaining the high favor of Fiedler. On Monday the "Request" program, which created such interest two weeks ago, will be repeated.

On Tuesday, Jacobus Langendoen will be the 'cello soloist in Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme. Cella's symphonic sketch, "The Lido," will be played for the first time anywhere. Mendelssohn's melodious "Fingal's Cave" overture will be another symphonic item on the program.

Russian music will fill the concert of Wednesday, when the most important composition will be the entire "Pathetic" symphony of Tchaikovsky. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist on Thursday evening—but not in "Rhapsody in Blue!" With the Pops orchestra he will play Rachmaninoff's C minor concerto.

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Worry over Dicky's reaction when he learns of her trip with Hugh is tempered by Madge's remembrance of the "Flosa" incident.

CHAPTER 65

I WAS glad indeed that Mrs. Ticer sat beside me in the front seat of my car when I returned from The Larches, and that I was driving, so that I had no time to think of anything but the wheel. I felt that I must not betray further to Hugh's keen, observing eyes, or hers, the agitation which I had falsely attributed to my injured ankle, but which was really due to my conviction that Lee Chow had been secretly watching me through the portieres as I talked with Hugh, in the interval between my telephone conversations.

There is something about driving a car which for me is an escape from all mental problems, and as I sent the machine swiftly along the road, I soon forgot not only my agitation concerning Lee Chow but my uneasiness over the possible reaction of Dicky and my mother-in-law to Hugh's accompanying me on the drive to Patchogue.

DECEIVING DICKY?

My conscience acquitted me of any permanent attempt to deceive Dicky, who, after all, was the only person who had any right to question Hugh's presence with me.

I reminded myself that I was not exactly a Chinese wife, whose mother-in-law had almost the power of life and death over her. I did not particularly care for the acrid comments which I knew would certainly follow discovery that Hugh was accompanying me to Patchogue, and therefore did not intend that Mother Graham should find out anything about the episode. But I recognized no authority of hers to control any action of mine.

As for Dicky, I meant to tell him of the incident at the first opportunity, and I felt that if he wished to be angry about an errand that I was undertaking solely for the purpose of saving his niece pain, I should borrow that young woman's vocabulary and call myself that "it was

"Won't you folks come in and have a cup of coffee and one of my doughnuts?" she asked hospitably, twisting herself around in order, I knew, that Major Grantland should feel himself definitely included in the invitation.

"I wish we could stop," I said, regretfully, for the fame of Mrs. Ticer's coffee and doughnuts had extended far beyond her own family, "but I dare not delay Mother Graham's errand."

"That's so," Mrs. Ticer acquiesced. "I can't blame you. Here! Don't turn into my driveway. You'll only delay yourself that much longer, and it's only a step to the house."

"Thank you, I am in a hurry," I told her, and the next instant Hugh was at the door, lifting her down with as much impressiveness as he would have shown to the mistress of the White House.

"NOT GOING TO SEE NOEL?"

Please drive," I said, and I slid over to the other side of the seat, while Hugh climbed to the place I had vacated and took the wheel. "I can enjoy everything so much better when I'm not driving, and I'm going to be selfish.

"Selfish? You!" Hugh exploded flatteringly. "You don't know the meaning of the word."

"You don't know me," I returned lightly, then added a banal comment upon the beauty of the trees which eased our conversation into safer channels.

We did not talk much upon the way to Patchogue. I stopped at the Southampton shop and secured the promise of the extra small cake boxes Mother Graham wished; farled for a minute or two, also, at the Hampton Bays but that I might have a plausible excuse to give her for Hugh hurried us along to Patchogue, where we arrived just in time to greet Avis Arlen, whose face registered disappointment when she saw me with Hugh.

"Oh!" she said, pulling herself together, "you came yourself, Mrs. Graham. How nice!"

"Yes, I thought I would save you that long drive to the farm and back tonight," I told her. "I was sure you could tell me all you wished in the interval before the next train back."

"Oh! Do you mean that I'm not going to the farm; not going to see No-el—and Mary?" she added, as if by an afterthought.

ON TREASURING THE CLEAR, SPARKLING BEAUTY OF THE EYES AND TEETH

Women Are Well Suited in Summer

By Prunella Wood

Now that hot weather is on us, it is time to say a few more words about that big revival, alpaca. No longer the best bet of Victorian housekeepers, is Hollywood, or the bathing dress fabric of timid left-overs from the Gay Nineties, it is with us 100 per cent in our streamlined age.

So what is the reason? Well, it is great stuff to wear well. It doesn't wrinkle disgustingly, on the body or in the trunk. It cleans and presses gratefully and quickly. It is cool in its lighter weights and protectively chummy in its heavier guises. It can be had in dull or shiny surfaces—lots of women look sunk in dull dark clothes who are positively chic in shiny dark clothes.

There is another material very popular just now which shares many of the alpaca's virtues. It is the printed silk Shantung which has been brought up to date in its designs and colorings.

It makes frocks which look especially well with the white woolen or linen coats which are always so good for summer wear, and it has body enough to take to good tailoring even though it is a distinctly summer material.

Light weight shiny black alpaca is used for the suit right above. Bamboo button and white Oriental blouse.

This navy blue alpaca suit is primarily destined for travel. It has a becoming two-button closing, a belted back and pockets.

Mental Hurdles Presented by Hands

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Bridge players have borrowed from the musical manufacturing trade a term to describe a hand which plays itself. Inasmuch as the pianola grinds out its music practically without the aid of human hands or human intelligence, a Bridge players speak of a hand which plays itself as a "pianola." As a matter of fact, there are few such hands, almost every hand at Bridge offering some slight mental hurdle to achieve the maximum number of tricks. There are others which require very careful planning to secure the best results—hands, for instance, of the type of the one below.

West, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The opening bid is, of course, obvious, as is East's response.

North's opening lead was the Ace of diamonds, followed by the three. The second trick was won in the closed hand, and the ace and king of spades led. When North failed to follow on the second spade lead, Mr. Grossbeck if the Deschapelles Club, led the ace of clubs and then the queen of diamonds, which he overtook with the king in dummy. On the fourth diamond the club ten was discarded. He led a small club from dummy, ruffing in his hand, and then led a spade, forcing South into the lead. The end-play was successful, for South led a small heart.

Cole Slaw Must Be Crisp and Fine Cut

By Martha Lee

HAVE YOU your own special recipe for Cole Slaw? There are probably as many as there are cooks in the land. The secret is to have a good sharp knife and shave young, crisp cabbage very fine. Not only is it a tasty dish, but healthful at the same time, for raw vegetables add much in the way of vitamins and minerals.

In an article entitled "Knife-and-Fork Suicide" in the July Cosmopolitan, Dr. William Howard Hay says that a good rule is that four-fifths of the foods eaten daily should be fruits and vegetables and a large proportion of these should be raw.

Cole Slaw may be served as a first course, or as a cold vegetable on a hot vegetable plate.

This recipe serves four to six. Two cups chopped cabbage, two-thirds cup cooked salad dressing, one teaspoon celery seed, one-half teaspoon paprika. Chop or shred the cabbage fine and let stand in ice water for one hour. Drain and mix with the dressing.

COOKED SALAD DRESSING

One half cup sugar; three tablespoons flour; one half teaspoon mustard; one teaspoon salt; one half teaspoon paprika; one eighth teaspoon white pepper; two eggs; one half cup vinegar; one half cup water; one fourth cup olive oil. Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly and add to the eggs, which have been well beaten, in the top of the enameled double boiler. Add vinegar and water slowly keeping the mixture smooth. Stir and cook over boiling water until the dressing is thick and smooth. Cook ten minutes. Add the oil and mix well.

VARIATIONS

Cole slaw becomes a more appealing appetizer if mixed with equal parts of chopped celery or her. A round or grated raw carrot or chopped pickled beets or pickle relish makes a nice garnish for it. Thick sour cream seasoned with celery seed and paprika is another favorite dressing for this salad.

New Drops Give Brilliance and Freshness to Tired, Overworked Eyes

POSED BY JEAN PARKER

By Juliet Shelby

DO YOU GO BLITHELY along giving your eyes and your teeth less care than you do your most piquant frock?

They are going to serve you, uninterrupted and unimpaired, in the long years to come—long after the loveliest dress is but a thing of memories and dreams.

Perhaps there is no feature as important to one's beauty as the eyes. They dominate the face, just as the face dominates the body. Through them is reflected your health and your state of mind, and by them, to a surprising degree, your well-being is controlled.

How few women realize that nervousness, headaches, fatigue and other ailments are caused directly by eye strain! One's very poise is destroyed if the eyes are not healthy and strong.

In caring for them properly they should be exercised, bathed and massaged every morning. And every evening they should be refreshed with an antiseptic eye lotion.

A skin specialist, who believes strongly that eyes are the keynote to all beauty, has created an eye lotion which she urges women to use after any day's work or overexposure to dust, wind and strong lights. Three or four drops applied to each eye with a dropper soothes them and refreshes them. After using it, lie down a few moments and relax. Let the solution roam around under the eyelids and wash out the irritations. It is surprising how it helps the eyes to regain the brilliancy and freshness they had in the morning.

No matter how lovely your eyes, you will not be called beautiful unless your teeth are well cleaned and kept healthy. A good toothbrush, at least two visits annually to your dentist, and an efficient tooth cleanser, are the very essentials of mouth protection and beauty.

In speaking of cleansers, I know of one that is about the best you can use to prevent tooth decay. It's not nice-tasting and it isn't delicately scented, but it does keep teeth immaculately free from stains and it has a deodorizing effect. And that's a lot to expect from any cleanser.

It's called sodium perborate and it is used by the dental profession everywhere. You may think the taste is rather awful at first, but after you get used to it, you'll not mind it a bit. And when you think that it actually preserves your teeth from decaying—you'll never be without it on your bathroom shelf.

To learn the name of any of these particles and where they can be purchased, telephone to Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Hair Arrangement

Question: I have a round, very full face. How should I arrange my hair to make my face appear more slender. My eyes are the one nice feature of my face but they are of the deep-set type. Would plucking my eyebrows make my eyes appear larger?

G. M., Boston.

Answer: Experiment with different styles of hair dressing. One way to make your face appear longer is to comb your hair straight back from your forehead, leaving it bare except for a stray curl or two, and leave it rather close at the sides. This will make your face appear longer and narrower. You can even show your ears if you care to!

You should use a little eye makeup to bring out the beauty of your eyes. Blue-green if your eyes are brown, green for hazel, blue for blue eyes. Blend a very little of the shadow on the upper lids close to the lashes and touch the lashes lightly with brown mascara. This will make your eyes appear larger. Brush and train your brows; pluck nothing but straggling hairs.

Sweet Almond Oil

Question: I am 15 years old and my hair is awfully thin. In fact it's so thin that parts of my scalp are visible. I have used olive oil shampoos for quite a while, but haven't noticed any new hair growing in. Is there anything I can do to make my hair grow?

R. B., Newton.

Answer: Hot oil shampoos, vigorous daily brushing of the hair, and a light scalp massage every day with the finger tips are all beneficial. It would appear that your scalp is extremely dry. Apply a bit of warm olive oil or sweet almond oil with your finger tips, massaging it lightly into the scalp. Do this nightly. Bodily disorders often cause hair to become dry and lifeless looking. In severe cases of falling hair and excessive dryness of the scalp, consult a reputable scalp specialist and let him suggest a tonic fitted to your individual requirements.

Daily Suggestion FOR Self-Improvement

When someone remarks "It was as beautiful as something out of Paul and Virginie" they are referring to a tragic love story by Bernadin de St. Pierre, published in 1788. It has been the subject of plays and operas in all tongues for nearly 150 years.

GIRL IN THE FAMILY

A Choice Between Marriage for Love or Loyalty

By Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER XXVI

John came back into the room dragging his old steamer trunk with him, whistling "By the Waters of Minnetonka" very softly.

"John," Susan said, helping him dust it off, "I'm going to tell you something that I hadn't planned to tell anyone for a while. I'm not going to marry Wallace."

"By the Waters of Minnetonka" broke off in the middle of one ripping measure.

"Yeah?" he asked, waiting for her to go on.

"That's more I've been for the last two or three hours—with Wallace. Trying to explain things to him," said Susan. "John, do you remember telling me that you didn't think I was so very crazy about him?—You were right, I thought I liked Wallace a lot, but now that I know Allen Sholes—" She threw out both her hands in a little helpless movement as if she were trying to show him just how hopeless her case was. "I'm just wild about him, John."

"Does he know it?"

"Of course he knows it. We're going to marry each other as soon as I've got away from Wallace and Allen has finished his course at law school and a few other minor details are out of the way."

SUSAN EXPLAINS

"Allen Sholes," said John slowly. "Have you told Wallie about him?"

"No. But I've told him I'm in love with oneone," said Susan. "The only thing that worries me about him is that I can't seem to convince him of it, and I'm afraid that he'll go to the folks about it next time he comes here to see me."

"To see you?" Blank astonishment came into John's face. "Good lord, what's he coming out here to see you for if you've broken your engagement to him—"

He stepped, cocked an eyebrow at her. "I'll bet you haven't broken it at all," he said. "If you had he wouldn't be making dates with you."

"Oh, he didn't make a date with me! He simply said that he's coming out certain night soon to talk all this over with me," Susan said in a rush. "I've given him back his ring and his watch bracelet—I've told him how I feel about him—I've made him terribly unhappy, and it just kills me—"

"Yes, I know you. You've done everything but come right out and tell him that you're off him for good," said John in his downright way. "Listen, Susan, if you're really through with that guy, why don't you go down to the telephone now and call him up—and tell him you never want to see him again? Tell him you're fed up! Be hard-boiled, but get it over to him!"

"Well, you'd better do it, too, if you feel like this about him," John interrupted her. "And you'd better do it today and tell the family about it while I'm here to back you up. If you don't you'll weaken as soon as they find out about it and start working on you . . . and first thing you'll know you'll be dragging a wedding veil up the aisle to Wallie Steffen . . . I'll call him and tell the family what you're doing, too, if you want me to. I'd enjoy it."

Susan's gray eyeys widened with arm. "Oh, no, John! Please don't do anything!" she begged. "If the family got it into their heads that I was turning Wallace down they'd think it was because of Allen. And they'd probably put him out."

"OLD ENGLISH STOCK"

He can downstairs to break the news that he was going away to the family and Susan cried as she packed his tennis racket and his boxes of typewriter paper, and the Bible that had belonged to his mother. He was taking so much more than himself away, it seemed to her. He was taking their past, his own and hers, too . . .

There was cold roast beef for dinner that night, and Aunt Edna came waddling out of the kitchen at six o'clock to ask Susan to make a Yorkshire pudding to go with it. The Brodericks had always made a great point of their English descent and there was a family coat-of-arms, framed, hanging in the hall. Toward the end of the meal Uncle Worthy got up from the table, walked into the hall, and came back carrying it in his arms.

"I'm going to give you this for a wedding present, young fellow," he said, flicking dust from it with his napkin and shooting an accusing glance at Susan whose dusting had been sketchy that morning because of her eagerness to go downtown to see Wallace. "You may enjoy showing it to your children some day. They may like to know that their people are fine old English stock."

"My mother always told me that Grandfather Broderick used to boast of having been a farm boy," answered John, taking the gift in his arms, "and I've always thought it was fine of him to admit it after he became rich, instead of pretending that he was something else. . . . Where did we get this thing?"

"Your Uncle Worthy sent for it. Some man makes a business of looking up people's family trees for them and having their coat-of-arms copied. It cost $500 to have it done," Lotie replied in a thick voice. She had had a bad cold for a day or two.

Susan left the house with him. They were to go to the Cullens' to pick up Connie on their way to the station, and as they started toward Mills road they saw Allen step from a street car that stopped at the corner. It was his night to go to his law class, and Susan had a sick uneasy conviction that he had come home early to hear what she had to tell him about Wallace.

He came up to them and spoke to John, catching Susan's hand in his for an instant, pressing it hard. "I just saw Mary Cullen and she told me that you and Connie were married today—that you're going away tonight."

WAY THINGS HAPPEN

"Yes, that's the way things happen in the newspaper business—with a snap," said John comfortably. "Can't you want to come along to the station with us? Then you can bring Susie back . . . We're going to the Cullens' first."

A southbound street car came along and they lifted John's suitcases to the platform and boarded it. "Where did he see Mary Cullen?" Susan asked herself as they sat down in a row. Mary with her clever way with men—Mary would manage to see him if she wanted to. And where did you see Mary, Allen?" Susan asked when they were hurrying down Mills Road, going single-file through the snow drifts.

"On the Public Square. She was on her way home and I was going to get something to eat. But when she told me about John I thought I'd better come home, I knew you'd be upset about him."

Susan's bare hand, curled inside her pocket, rested on his arm and found it. She was no longer jealous of Mary Cullen.

In the driveway that ran along the side of the Cullen's house stood their touring car. The kind of car that the Cullens would have—long and roomy and sturdy. Dark figures moved around it against the blue-whiteness of the snow, stowing Connie's luggage away in it, and Connie's voice called out to John as he hurried up the street, "Hurry, hurry, or we'll miss our train and our job and everything else."

She came running to him and they clung to each other at the foot of the front walk as if they had been separated for weeks and days instead of just a few hours.

Mary drove the car to the station and Connie and John sat in the front seat with her. The rest of them crowded into the back seat with their feet on the bags that were piled on the floor.

All the way downtown everyone talked about the plans that the bride and groom had made for their future. "I'm going to have a lending library just as soon as I can rent a shop of some kind and get it fixed up," Connie said.

"That's the right idea, Connie," Aunt Nell declared. "I dont see any reason why a girl shouldn't work until the new furniture's paid for, at least."

She leaned across Susan and spoke to Allen who sat in the corner. "Any time you hear of anyone who wants a nice room and board in a private family, you send him around to me," she said.

YOUNG AMONG STRANGERS

"I'll tell them," promised Allen.

In the station, dazzlingly white under its lights, he stopped at a flower stand and bought flowers for Connie's black coat and an armful of newspapers and magazines for John.

The tracks gleamed like silver stretching miles and miles away toward the south. The train came sliding down the tracks with a great noise and stopped. There was a moment of confusion while John hunted for his Pullman tickets and helped Connie into the train. "All aboard!" shouted the "Board — All aboard —" and the train slowly slid into motion again. They were gone.

Out in the station yard with its taxicabs and freight trucks, churning into muddy snow, Mary prepared everyone go back to the Cullen's for the evening.

But Susan shook her head and said she had to go home.

"And we want to be alone, don't we?" she murmured to Allen when the Cullins had climbed back into their touring car and disappe red. He ducked his head and kissed her

Allen in the next instalment answers Susan. He tells her she is still engaged to Wallace.

Roller Skating Party

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

The girls of my club have planned a roller skating party, and each girl is to invite a young man friend. I have already asked a friend to escort me, and now a discussion comes up when I want Mother to give me the fare. She believes that I am making myself cheap by paying for this young man, whom I also asked to our Prom.

If it is right to pay for this young man, shall I give him the money to pay for us both? This seems rather an embarrassing situation and I would certainly like to do what is correct.

MARY.

I agree with your mother that it would be less embarrassing if you leave it as the young man's responsibility to pay the fare to the party.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received a wedding gift from the girls in my office and the card was signed with the names of all the girls who contributed. Will it be proper for me to address the envelops to the head girl of the office, and what would be the correct way of wording the card of thanks?

C.

Since each girl signed her name, you should write a separate note of thanks to each kind contributor to this wedding gift. Thank each one first for the thoughtfulness, the generous plan for this gift, and then chat with each one about the gift, its beauty, how you plan to use it in your new home. Don't send a "card of thanks" . . . write a note of thanks.

Flaring Organdie Bretelles

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9677

There is a lot to be said for this new vogue for crisp materials—and this little frock says it charmingly. Once a woman sees those gay bretelles flaunting their flares in organdie, she becomes a convert on the instant—she just cannot wait to feel them flutter on her own fair shoulders. Of course, voile or dimity or chiffon would be equally lovely. And just to prove what a clever little frock it is, note how that waistcoat thing-a-jig pretends to button down so the belt will have a proper place from which to start.

Pattern 9677 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Send your order to Boston American Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Scissors Fit Every Use

SCISSORS have become specialists. There's a scissors for manicure, pinking scissors, pedicure scissors, pocket scissors, desk scissors, dressmaking shears, and each one is designed to make easier and quicker some particular job around the home. In fact, if you are a conscientious housewife, you can spend hours in selecting a suitable assortment to bring your household cutlery up-to-date.

Of course, you will have to draw the line somewhere. You don't want scissors sticking out from every nook and cranny of your home. But by all means do get a pair of new kitchen shears, as handy a gadget to have around as you will come across in many a day.

To begin with, you'll never have any more trouble with bottle caps or screw-on jar tops with these shears in your kitchen. A notch on the outer rim of one of the handles serves to pry off pressed-on beverage bottle caps, and the inner part of the shears, between the handles and the screw, is grooved to unscrew bottle tops, crack nuts and perform similar services where a firm grip is needed. The blades have a fine, saw-like edge and can not only make quick work of cutting up string beans and celery and other vegetables, but are guaranteed to cut through wire, tin, flower stems and all such things without dulling. The handles are shaped for comfort and come in red, yellow, green, blue or ivory.

And then you'll want at least one or two pairs of good dressmaking and sewing scissors. For the average housewife, a pair of cutting and trimming shears, and perhaps a small pair with needle-points to snip threads and do fine work.

THREE TREMENDOUS MOMENTS IN BAER-CARNERA THRILLER

A CLOSE CALL—This is a closeup of the most exciting moment in the fight, the incident which came close to costing Baer his well-earned victory. It happened in the third round. At the beginning you see Carnera draped on the ropes in his own corner. Baer had smashed him into the ropes with a sweeping right hand. Carnera is down. Baer should have retired to a neutral corner. Instead, he stood over the champion, threatening to strike again. Referee Donovan is shown pushing him away, thereby preventing a foul that would have disqualified Baer. Carnera would have been declared the winner had Baer struck. Harry O. Voller Official Fight Pictures.

ALL OVER!—The final chapter in the big battle. Here you see Carnera actually falling for the knockdown which ended the fight in the eleventh round. Baer has just landed his right to Carnera's jaw as this scene opens and stands there deliberating whether to follow it up with his left, and Donovan stopped the match.

Cold Cuts and Hash About the Baer and Carnera Episode

Tea, Roses and Prize Fighting; the Blight On Champion's Fitness

By AUSTEN LAKE

LOOKING AT THE AFFAIRE Baer-Carnera in the cold, gray dawn of reason, I still maintain that Carnera was a whipped man at the moment he entered the Garden Bowl while he stood looking out over the crowd for Baer, with a hunted, anxious look.

Austen Lake

It can be said now, on the evidence shown, that Carnera is not a gifted fighter, and never had a stomach for his profession; that Baer for all his mighty, home run wallops, would have been spanked nothing less than silly by some of the past technicians of the sport, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and . . . yes, Jack Sharkey in his prime.

DON'T MISTAKE, FRIENDS, the new champion, for all his leering, monkey-faced grimacing, has the "killer instinct" under the surface. I think his play-boy posing screens as cruel a punisher, for the sweet sake of inflicting damage.

The curl of scorn and rooster-strutting was a perfect mask against the stolid, slow-thinking giant. Yet suddenly, out of his possum posing, Baer would flash a torrent of smashes. And then the lip-curl was one of wanton savagery and the laughing light in his eyes would turn to squinty, pin-points of white light.

I would say that, as a serious, plodding fighter, devoid of dramatic instinct, Baer would lose much of his effectiveness. For he seems to have no great boxing finish and would be a wide open target for a fast, small man. Too bad Mickey Walker has faded out of the picture.

Moonlight and Roses in the Garden Bowl

IT IS A COMMENTARY on the character of Max Baer, that he had a mouthful of tea roses in his dressing room after the fight, evidently not of his own purchasing, and leaving only to surmise that some affectionate lady had ordered the blossoms delivered before the fight, either to sooth his sorrow in defeat or his delight in victory.

THE BLIGHT ON MOST champions, as soon as they attain the heights is hatred of the training grind. That and the scarcity of eligible opponents. Training was poison to Sharkey, who allowed his muscles to sag through idleness long before their normal time. Dempsey was about the only modern champion who relished the drudge of camp work. Baer certainly detests hard labor, and the chances are he will vote for long intervals between battles.

Yet, even now, there is some small talk of arranging a fight with Steve Hamas or Tommy Loughran as a pot boiler for the early fall. This would probably meet with the approval of the Baer-backers, or they term the many men who are riding around on the champ's carfare power, who have an agreement with the Madison Square Garden for one more fight, and want that fight as nearly a setup as possible.

Food for Wonderment in Donovan's Action

I STILL SAY THAT the fight did not merit being stopped in the eleventh round on the strength of Carnera's condition, believing that the customers should receive 100 cents' worth of frightfulness. And I still think that Carnera was choked more by his own emotion than damaged by Baer's haymakers, wherein among the army of experts I will probably continue to stand alone as a bloodthirsty ruffian.

There has not yet been a satisfactory explanation of why Referee Art Donovan stepped between the fighters in the tenth round after Carnera had been knocked down, and I will always believe that he had the half-formed impulse to halt the action right there.

Donovan offered the lame excuse later that the bell had rung. Whereas, in reality, the gong did not sound until almost a minute later, by which time Donovan was motioning the warriors together again.

IF, AT THE MOMENT, it was Donovan's intention to squelch the frolic, it would have been sheer hokus-pokus. Because, bear in mind that Carnera had won the previous, or ninth round on points, and there seemed to be slight indications of Baer's fading.

Carnera, who today has gone into retirement, mumbled something about continuing to fight and wanting a chance to meet Baer again. Perhaps in a year's time such a match will be made, since the field of suitable timber is thin. But I'll wager that Carnera's fighting life is limited to a short future and that within a short space he will retire to the limbo where ex-prize ring figures go.

The history of super-big men has been that they do not like to fight. Consider Willard and Firpo, the biggest of the lot. Dreadnoughts as a rule do not belong to the tiger breed.

Carnera, up to Friday night, was accustomed to be regarded as a huge ogre, a supernatural animal. They said he couldn't be knocked out. Yet when Baer showed open contempt for his size, it must have shocked the huge man's vanity and drained off his confidence.

But, as for me, I'm still waiting to see Baer tested against a man of reasonable glove cleverness and fighting heart, before he will be a reincarnation of Jack Dempsey.

DUSEK OUT AS CHALLENGER FOR CROWN

By Max Kase

Edward Don George, the heavyweight wrestling champion hummed a cheerful little sarful today, dedicated to Ernie Dusek, a brother of the mat fraternity.

"You've become a habit to me," chirped Ed Don, in his best basso, and so it would seem, with his third successful defense of his crown against the rough assaults of the bad, bad man from the open spaces of Omaha.

his crown against the rough assaults of the bad, bad man from the open spaces of Omaha.

Ed Don slam- -l his rival to the mat in one hour, 13 minutes and 25 seconds of gruelling action at the Garden last night but not before he was on the verge of the conventional defeat several times.

The bout was supposed to have gone the best of three falls but it terminated with only one down after the men had tugged, pulled, hauled, grunted and grimaced past the one hour mark. The rules demand only one fall after 60 minutes of burping, probably to comply with a wrestling code under the NRA.

DON NEAR DEFEAT

The finish came in a blaze of action with both men swinging roundhouse blows. Dusek placed George on the carousel, which in mat parlance is a giant swing. The champion came out of the merry go-round dizzy but swinging freely.

George then picked up the 210-pound Dusek corn-fed frame, made the ring tremble with a heavy body slam and pinned him with an inside crotch. It sounds most expert.

Before the finish both of the noble athletes had been severely but not seriously punished by gruelling holds. George appeared on the verge of defeat at the half hour mark when the terrible Ernie man clamped a hammerlock on him, which later turned into a grapevine and continued the grip for fully ten minutes.

TONNEMAN GOES DIVING

George retaliated with a grapevine, followed by an armstretch, which is intended to either make the recipient curl over or relinquish the arm from the socket. But Dusek did neither, kicking, clawing and gouging his way to the break.

If any real honors, chevrons or awards are handed out in the match, they should be made of Ted Tonneman, the referee, who probably scales 150 pounds after a feast. Tonneman was catapulted out of the ring by one of George's flying tackles, landed on his head and appeared more punished than either of the gladiators.

In one of the piece-de-resistances of the evening, Hans Steinke, also known as the German Oak, not only failed in his boast to throw three men in one hour but found himself a loser in less than 15 minutes. Steinke picked Nick Lutze, the blond Adonis, out of a trio of potential victims, the other "sacrifices" being Everett Marshall and Joe Malcewics.

But Lutze refused to be cast in a "stooge" role and made an acorn of the oak with the help of a series of flying butts accompanied by a body slam.

Wales Henri DeGlane pinned the bald Slavon Casey Kazanjian in a bit more than 21 minutes of the semi-final.

Pat O'Hara of Atlanta defeated Abe Rothberg of New York, with a body hold; Karl Pojello, New York, beat Jim Wallis, Holy Cross, with a body lift; Red O'Dell of Schenectady wrestled Billy Bartush of Chicago to a ten-minute draw, and John Spellman, once of Crown Hill, Ind., and Bull Martin of Trenton went even for 15 minutes in the preliminaries.

BROOKLINE BOY NAMED CAPTAIN

New London, Ct., Jun 16—Although rowing interest centered at Poughkeepsie today for the 36th rowing of the classic regatta there, Yale and Harvard crews remained at their daily grind on the Thames river here whipping themselves into condition for the annual regatta on the Thames June 22.

Friday evening Yale's mighty crew undefeated this season, rowed down the full four-mile course and was timed unofficially at 21 minutes 12 1-5 seconds.

Another watch showed 21 minutes 57 seconds. At the two-mile point the varsity picked up the freshman crew and beat it to the wire by a half boat length.

Philip Vaughn Bray, Harvard junior from Brookline, Mass., last night was elected captain of the junior Varsity crew.

'After the Maul Was Over' Primo's Song Now

Smiling through despite the hammering he received when he was knocked from the heavyweight throne by Max Baer, Primo Carnera looks at the world. Note hammered nose, swollen jaw where Baer tattooed with his right, and other signs of battle. The Upset Alp is not downhe nrted. He hopes to climb back to the top. (Pictures by International Photos.)

Here's the injured ankle, taped up after treatment, which Carnera's friends say made it impossible for him to fight well against Max Baer. The ankle was injured early in the championship go, and thereafter it is certain that Primo failed to hurl Baer very much. Meanwhile Maxie was thumping Primo vigorously. The ankle has been blamed by the Alp's pals for the latter sad item.

And now Dr. Vincenze Fanoni ministers to Primo Carnera's ailing ankle, while John Pasquali sits on the arm of Preem's chair and attempts to cheer up the ex-champ. Pasquali is a cousin of the giant ringman. Relatives and other friends of Primo are rallying to his support, and they have encouraged the vanquished warrior to plan a comeback.

Palrey, Jacobs Triumph to Give U. S. Net Cup

By Charles A. Smith
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Wimbledon, Eng., June 16—With little Sarah Palfrey of Brookline, Mass., in the role of heroine, the United States won the Wightman Cup from Great Britain for the fourth consecutive year today.

The American victory was by the conclusive and devastating score of four matches to one. The United States lost only the doubles, winning both single matches today as well as yesterday.

The American triumph in the twelfth renewal of the tennis classic staged to decide British-American superiority in the Women's bracket of the game was traceable largely to Miss Palfrey's brilliant performance.

Yesterday she downed the redoubtable Dorothy Round of England, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6, and today she took the measure of Peggy Scriven, the brilliant British star, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6.

JACOBS DOUBLE WINNER

Sharing honors with Miss Palfrey was Helen Jacobs, the American national champion, who likewise won both her singles matches.

Today she thoroughly trounced Dorothy Round 6-4, 6-4, finishing her off in straight sets just as she did Miss Scriven yesterday by the score of 6-2, 6-1.

Thus Britain once again tossed away her bid for the valued trophy, despite the fact her chances this year were greater than at any time in recent seasons.

The American team was crippled by the absence of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and of Miss Alice Marble. The California ex-champion is still suffering from the back injury which resulted in her default in the nationals at Forest Hills last year, while Miss Marble, who collapsed at Auteuil a fortnight ago, was still too weak to enter this tournament.

PRAISE FOR SARAH

British and American critics were outspoken in their admiration of Miss Palfrey's sterling performance. Miss Jacobs had been virtually conceded victory in both her matches, even though Miss Scriven defeated her in the French championships, but the British were hopeful that young Miss Palfrey would falter in at least one of her encounters.

Such, however, was not the case. Beautiful services, brilliant angled shots, miraculous placements and an unusual courage in playing close to the net instead of always hugging the baseline as most women players do, enabled her to take the measure of two of Britain's leading stars and to carve herself an envied place in the roster of Wimbledon heroes.

The last set of the Palfrey-Scriven match was a classic.

The American girl was in a seemingly hopeless position with the score 5—3 against her. But she got a grip on herself, producing superb tennis to stave off defeat by winning the next game and from there on she never looked back.

The match was played out from 5-all amid thunderous applause. Miss Scriven rapidly went to pieces after she had run it to deuce at 6-all and the last two games were easy for the American.

ROYALTY SEES MATCH

Miss Scriven began hesitantly, dropping the first two games of the opening set. She improved to take the next two, however, just as the King and Queen of Siam entered the royal box to view the proceedings.

Miss Scriven's improvement was not only consistent but effective for she slashed away at her young American opponent to win the first set 6—4. Miss Palfrey's forehand was weak and she frequently hit easy returns out of the court, although she shone with her soft lobs and drop-shots during the set.

The American girl came back with a rush and a roar, recapturing all of her brilliance to take the second set at 6—2 and even matters.

Helen Jacobs, American National champion, easily won the first set of her match against Dorothy Round. Miss Round put up a battle, however, winning four games before the stocky Californian snagged the set 6—4.

BASELINE DUEL

The second set was a grim, exhausting duel from the baselines. Miss Jacobs won the first game but lost the next four in succession.

The British girl uncorked top form tennis to win the ninth game with a series of brilliant cross-court shots, and pushed the tenth to deuce before Miss Jacobs was able to stem the tide and win the set, 6-4, and match.

The players left the court amid tumultuous cheers.

The British registered their second victory of the series when pretty Betty Nuthall won a hard fought three set match from Carolyn Babcock, California youngster, 5—7, 6—3, 6—4.

The series was brought to an end with an American victory when Miss Jacobs and Miss Palfrey defeated Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Goddree in a doubles match, 8—7, 6—3.

$50,000 PRIZE OFFERED CHAMP BY CARNERA

New York, June 16 (INS)—Primo Carnera can not fight again for fully three months, his personal physician, Dr. Vincent Fanoni, said today after X-ray picture of the giant Italian's injured ankle showed a chipped talus bone.

Primo must remain in the hospital for one to three weeks with the injured leg in a cast for at least a week, Mr. Fanoni announced.

"This is one of the most painful injuries a man can get," Dr. Fanoni said as he explained that the talus is the bone of the ankle that articulates with the leg bones.

The X-rays also revealed Primo suffered a torn ligament in the same leg.

The vast Italian, sprawled full length on the hospital table, received the doctors report with satisfaction and hurled a $50,000 challenge at Max Baer.

"I can beat Baer any time, any place," he shouted. "When my leg is well, I fight him winner take all, and if he beats me I give him $50,000."

Talking with reporters Dr. Fanoni said he was amazed Carnera was able to continue after hurting his ankle.

The big Italian is much concerned over the American public's reaction to his defeat.

"I want to make a statement to my American public," he said. "I am sorry for what happened. It wasn't my fault. Fix it up for me. Tell them I'm not the bonehead they think I am. I think you can tell now I really was injured."

GOMEZ, HUBBELL CHOICE OF FANS

Mr. Boston Says:

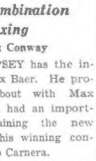
Dempsey Controls Baer Winning Combination Will Aid Boxing

By Jack Conway

JACK DEMPSEY has the inside call on Max Baer. He promoted Baer's bout with Max Schmeling, and had an important part in training the new champion for his winning contest with Primo Carnera.

Dempsey is the only man from whom Baer takes advice. It was Jack Dempsey who induced Adolph Pollin, that manager from the Coast to Asbury Park, N. J., when he found the new title holder in poor physical condition. Thomas may probably remain with Baer.

Tex Rickard and Dempsey dreamed back in 1926 of bolstering up the heavyweight championship. Rickard planned to break with the Garden and form a partnership with the colorful Dempsey.



Mr. Boston

Rickard's death ended this plan for control of the heavyweight division. Dempsey always hoped he could accomplish the plan set down by Rickard, and it now looks as if he was going to be able to do so.

* * *

One Fight for Garden

BAER MUST engage in his first title defense bout for the New York Garden. After that he will be a free agent and will go with Dempsey.

The Garden has been trying to sign Dempsey to take charge of its boxing department. It delayed doing so pending the outcome of the title match. Now that Baer has won it will be more anxious than ever to do so.

Dempsey, however, may decide he does not need the Garden. At heart Dempsey is a gypsy, and likes to travel. He would get more enjoyment out of touring the country with Baer than he would remaining in New York. A Baer-Dempsey show is the biggest possible attraction for a tour.

Baer Likes Movies

BAER WILL make another picture in Hollywood. He likes the movies and the excitement that goes with that life. He also enjoys the social life of Hollywood. He also plans a new radio program.

One can not judge Baer by ordinary training rules. He is another Maxie Rosenbloom in this respect. He can get in condition doing his stuff at the night clubs.

Baer reminds me a great deal of the late Harry Greb. The latter never was too particular about his training, but could always turn in a first class fight.

Hamas After Baer

CHARLEY HARVEY tells me he will try to match Steve Hamas with Baer. Hamas gained considerable fame the night he licked Max Schmeling in Philadelphia.

Walter Neusel and Max Schmeling will also try to secure bouts with Baer.

Baer is a terrific puncher, and can take it. He is only 25 years old, and should remain champion for several years. I do not believe any of the contenders for his title can defeat him.

Carnera will probably demand a return bout. There is some ground to the claim he was overtrained, but I do not think Baer will ever be able to lick Max. The latter is too shifty for him, and has proved he can box with a right hand. Baer is going to knock out any heavyweight he can tag with his right duke.

As I watched Baer crush Carnera, I became convinced it was Max and not Carnera who caused the downfall of Ernie Schaaf. The latter fought Baer in all 20 rounds, and during that time took some terrific punches.

Schaaf won the first ten-round bout which was held in New York, and was knocked out in the second contest with less than ten seconds to go. Ernie was leading on points going into the tenth round. He had taken some of Baer's best punches, and the power behind them spreads probably caused some hidden injury.

Baer is the greatest thumper the heavyweight division has had since Jim Jeffries' day. He is a better socker than Dempsey as he does his heavy execution with a long right hand drive. Dempsey's best punch was a left hook.

I look for new interest in boxing now that the colorful Baer is champion.

MR KHAYYAM AT AQUEDUCT—

Bonthron, Cunningham Expected To Do 4:06 Mile at Princeton

By Walter Kiley

A mile in 4.06 by either Billy Bonthron of Princeton or Glenn Cunninghan of Kansas; and a half mile in 1.50 from Charles "Chuck" Hornbostel of Indiana or "Big Ben" Eastman of Stanford, times which appeared not only impossible but impossible a few years back, are in prospect this evening as a picked group of the nation's outstanding athletes compete over lightning fast cinders in Princeton University's invitation track meet. A crowd of 40,000 spectators is anticipated.

The first clash between the two spellbinders of the indoor season, Bonthron and Cunningham, is perhaps the most anticipated event in recent years of track and field running. It is the lure which attracts, for a new world record is not without the bounds of reason.

"RUBBER" DUEL

Of course Gene Venske, Penn's great miler, will be in there to add lustre and speed up the early pace. But having trailed both his rivals on so many previous occasions, it is unlikely that he will prove more than a third place finisher.

The Tiger is reported to be in prime condition for this race of races. The Kansan who arrived in Princeton last night has been short on workouts for the past month or more, due to examinations and lack of suitable opposition.

He ran a three quarter trial in 3.1 last Monday. His last serious races were with Venzke in April when he did 4:12.7 and 4:11.8 on successive Saturdays.

But this fact means little to Cunningham, a runner who needs few workouts to keep in shape.

Cunningham is America's fastest miler as his 4:08.4 record proves. He set this mark indoors. Bonthron holds America's outdoor mark, 4:08.7, a feat performed while running second to Jack Lovelock of New Zealand as the latter was forced by the Princetonian to the present world record of 4:06.7, a time which the boys are shooting at this evening.

Both hold hairline decisions over the other. Bonthron won by the width of a hair over the Kansas flier in the Baxter indoor mile. The Kansan came back to win the National A. A. U. 1500 meter championship by an equally narrow margin.

TWO 1:50 MEN

Eastman is said to be as fast as he was a couple of years ago when his name was a household word among sport followers. In Hornbostel, he meets a worthy opponent. They both have turned in half miles in 1:50.3, better than the accepted world mark.

The Tigers have invited only 21 participants, all outstanding.

Brown, Thompson, McWilliams, Berlinger and Sutermeister open the competition this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the pole vault. The Follows-McCluskey-Mangan-Sears two mile run is scheduled for 6:10. Ring, Fuqua, Kane, Hoffman and Elliott go to the 440-yard starting post at 6:30, followed by the half mile and mile features.

C. H. S. STARS LED BY .513 SLUGGER

By Bill Connell

A hard-hitting nine of top flight defensive rank was announced today when Reverend George M. Dowd named the 1934 All-Star Catholic High School League baseball team.

The group, selected by the coaches of the league, ranks with the most powerful ever named from the circuit. Two of the boys hit for better than .500, six hit over .400, while the remaining two first team players hit above .300.

Two first grade pitchers are honored with first team selection, and both are from St. Mary's high of Brookline, league champion this year. Each won seven games this year, losing one each.

Melville, who captains St. Mary's sext spring, hit .320, with many of his blows coming in the pinches. He struck out 103 in 77 2-3 innings. Sullivan fanned 79 in 53 1-3 innings and batted for an even .400.

Catcher Thommy McManus of Cathedral hit for .410, and flashed back of the plate. Will McManus, catching either Melville or Sullivan, this nine would have a battery second to none in school ranks.

CONNORS HITS FOR .513

Frank Connors of St. Charles High in Waltham was the top batsman of the slugging league with an amazing .513 average. His fielding was right up to his high hitting standard with a .982 percentage. Second Baseman Ed Shaughnessy of St. Mary's in Waltham hit for .422 and starred in the field.

John Smith of Immaculate Conception High, Revere, hit for .328, which seems a slim average in such company. But his hitting was timely and his fielding excellent. Shortstop Nick Harrigan of Cathedral batted for .407 and covered more ground than most outfielders, on defense.

COLLEGE MATERIAL

Melville, Sullivan, O'Connell and McManus were All-Star team selections a year ago. Their sustained high grade play richly merited them the honor for the second successive year.

However, the players of the league are right on a par with the public high school circuit. Boys from the league already have gone on to college and stayed up in the fast company. Anyone of this C. H. S. nine's players is capable of bigger things and can star in the college ranks, a couple of years hence.

50,000 on Hudson Banks for P'keepsie Race

By Pat Robinson

International News Service Sports Writer

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 16—A perfect day greeted the 33th annual intercollegiate regatta today. A clear sky, a flat Hudson and a slight following wind made conditions all that the most captious crew coach could desire.

Early this afternoon the vanguard of 50,000 rowing enthusiasts who will watch the varsity, jayvee and frosh fleets in action, lined the banks of the river from the starting point at Krum Elbow to the finish a mile below the new Poughkeepsie Highland bridge.

Every coach was quietly confident of the outcome and if their opinions mean anything, a wide open varsity race outside each individual boat's course is in prospect. That is to say, Ky Ebright, coach of the California crew, for instance, thinks it will be a wide open race among all the others with his own boys out in front.

Every shop in this sleepy old town was forced to close for the afternoon as the town [illegible] proved an ma[illegible] Californian [illegible] race w[illegible] California [illegible] money on the [illegible] 3 to 1; [illegible] Columbia [illegible]

Several members of the crew of 1883 who manned the first Navy boat, a boat captained by Winston Churchill, were on hand to see how them were Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, who will become superintendent of the United States Naval Academy this month.

Hours before the start of the freshman race, boats of all sizes and shapes could be seen moving up the Hudson. Everything from a millionaire's palatial yacht to a mud scow towed by a tug was in evidence.

Seven Coast Guard cutters patrolled the course to keep the lanes clear for action.

As an added attraction Gordon has carded a six-round bout under European rules which will have Ted Germaine of South Boston and Gil La Cross, the Nova Scotia [illegible]

YACHTS START TRIAL TEST AT NEWPORT

By Associated Press

Newport, R. I., June 16—Harold S. Vanderbilt today put his yacht, Rainbow over the starting line in the best position in the opening of the trial contests for the honor of defending America's cup against the British challenge this summer.

The race, delayed more than two hours because of absence of breeze was over a 17-mile course to windward and leeward.

The Weetamoe of Frederick H. Prince of Boston, the only other eligible contender in today's three-cornered race, found herself under Rainbow's lee. Vanitie, originally built for a cup contest in 1914, but now ineligible, kept to herself at the start and the competition developed between Weetamoe and Rainbow.

30,000 TO SEE CANOE RACE

5000 USHER IN RACE MEET AT BROOKLINE

By Dave Egan

COUNTRY CLUB, Brookline, June 16—The green lawns of the Country Club were alive and teeming with color, as the 44th race meeting of the Eastern Horse Club was held today.

The pride and chivalry of Boston was on parade. Beauty was on hand to watch the beast.

The panorama was splendid. Over the fertile green, about 5000 swarmed in holiday spirit, as the bluebloods of the racing world went into action.

ANNAPOLIS WINS OPENER

Form players got off to a good start when they backed Annapolis into odds on favoritism. The son of Man o' War justified that confidence by toying with his opponents throughout to have a six-length margin over Larissa. The latter easily bested Indian Message for the place.

The second race—The Myopia—for three-year-olds and up—drew a ding-dong battle between Fast Chance and Chalice, with Mrs. Paul A. Shaw's Fast Chance sticking out his nostrils to win at the last moment.

Because of the crush of entries in the Myopia, it was divided into two sections. Pompeus, a huge favorite, was withdrawn, but on Monday, he should be a most juicy morsel.

MAY RETIRE TROPHY

The feature of the race program is the 18th running of the National Hunt Club Handicap, a three-mile gallop restricted to amateur jockeys with a purse of $1500, small change not even to the backers of the Eastern Horse Club these days, by the winner.

Battleship, son of Man O'War, is my choice to repeat for he won it a year ago. Battleship is owned by Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville. If Battleship wins, Mrs. Somerville will retire the National Hunt Club trophy, valued at $500.

In the second section, Master B. Kocks took Brigadier Rose to victory. Your Ambassador plunged to the extent of two back-won bucks on Aquaurius, a top-heavy favorite, but Aquarius was nowhere to be found when the payoff came.

Idolatry ran second, and Foray third. It was too bad about Aquarius, though.

Passive, W. D. Cleland's bay maze, won the 15th running of Brookline Handicap, a steeplechase. Way out in front from the start, Passive had enough courage to withstand the terrific spurt of Clio and won by a length. St. Francis, highly favored, finished third.

Yale Golfers Win Over Harvard

By Associated Press

Worcester, Mass., June 16—The Yale golf team moved into a tie with Princeton for the eastern collegiate golf championship when it defeated Harvard by 5½ to 3½ today at the Wachusett Country Club.

Bond and Brannigan (Harvard) defeated Travers and Eshelman (Yale) 2 up. Towns and Weatherwax (Yale) defeated Hunt and Sibley (Harvard) 4 and 3. Resnick and Shurley (Yale) defeated Bond and Collins (Harvard) 2 up.

The Yale team has lost but one match during the league competition and will meet Princeton, the only team to defeat it, June 23 at Cleveland for the title.

Upsets Mark Play In French Duel

Paris, June 16 (AP)—Andre Merlin, third ranking French tennis player, today scored a smashing upset to beat Jack Crawford, Australia's No. 1 ace, and into the French Davis Cup team an even break in the opening matches in the semi-final round of the European zone competition. The scores were 4—6, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2.

The downfall of Crawford was preceded by another upset, the defeat of Christian Boussus, France's ranking singles player, by 75-year-old Vivian McGrath, of Australia, in five sets, 6—3, 0—6, 6—8, 6—2, 6—2.

The new trophy will be awarded annually to a member of the Tiger track team on the basis of sportsmanship, devotion to Princeton's interests and athletic endeavor, a replica of the cup will be presented to each winner for permanent possession while his name is engraved upon the trophy itself.

MOESER GIVES ANOTHER GOLF TROPHY

By Bill Grimes

Just as soon as he had been informed that the A. J. Frost Cup had been retired by the William Filene's Sons & Co. during the 35th annual Retail Trade Board tournament at the South Shore Country Club, David E. Moeser, comptroller of Conrad & Co., donated another trophy.

Since the inception of the [illegible] Trade Board tournaments, there has been two trophies offered for store championships. Harvey L. Schaschke, Gilchrist, offered the first cup, which Filene's won for the third time in 1927.

Then, A. J. Frost of William Filene's Sons & Co. offered another cup which took seven years to retire.

MATTHEWS GOOD SUB

Going into this year's tournament, Filene's and Shepard Stores had two legs, and Filene's and Gilchrist companies had won a leg.

Capt. George Saxe fielded an exceptionally strong team at the Shore. As a result, the Filene's cardsd a very creditable net total of 284, which gave them possession of the cup by a margin of 13 strokes over the C. F. Hovey Co.

Because Dick Ruggles, ex-state junior champion, is not an executive at Filene's, he was not allowed to participate for the Frost Cup. Sid Matthews substituted for Ruggles and came up with a net 78, as did Jack Egan.

With one half of the Filene team in with a total net of 156, it did not look so good for Capt. Saxe's outfit, but then Jack McCarthy, the perennial champion of Retail Trade Board tournaments, handed in a gross 71 and a net 65 and Filene's was right back in the running.

McCARTHY LOW MAN

At this point, [illegible] reception of the cup hinged on George Saxe's ability to finish.

The Filene captain started his round with a seven [illegible] and [illegible] a four. Then, after [illegible] ing off four pars, [illegible] Trio. But Saxe was one [illegible] ter, as McCarthy was also [illegible] offsetting his birdie on the 1st hole by three putts on the green. Saxe [illegible] ed a birdie on the "bird" at the 10th, [illegible] an extra putt to get [illegible] 13th.

Outfielder Davis Back With Phils

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP)—Centerfielder George Davis returns to the Phillies in a new players' trade announced by Gerald Nugent, president of the National League Club.

Formerly with the Phillies and traded to the New York Giants in 1932, Davis was obtained yesterday from the St. Louis Cardinals in return for Chick Fullis, Philadelphia outfielder. The deal, a straight player-for-player move, is the latest maneuver in Manager Jimmy Wilson's campaign to rejuvenate the local nine.

Hearst Stock Record in Past Year Is Exceptional

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Earnings just short of 100 per cent in excess of dividend requirements in the most chaotic year in modern economic history. That is the record turned in by Hearst Consolidated Publications on the two million shares of class A cumulative 7 per cent preferred in 1933. Such an earnings record amply testifies to the benefits of a well ordered investment in the publishing industry. With great newspaper interests located in the principal industrial and business centers the income of Hearst consolidated Publications had well nigh matter what troubles beset any or two sections of the country. Besides, these earnings were but marked by the income of great national magazines which recognize no sectional boundaries

The fact that the Stock list took the news of the German default in good fashion leads many observers to the conclusion extra strength has developed from upside resistance must be looked for at higher levels than heretofore. The news, moreover, should dwell with market weakness. Yet the last did not dip inside the 9-8-32 area. Instead the low of 97.23 acted as the turning point. The Traders' Advisory Service, whose technical studies are held in high esteem now consider that the next upside barrier is at 10[illegible].

Current bulletin of the American Institute of Finance contains the third recommendation of Brooklyn Manhattan Transit since February. It was first recommended between 33-35, then under 35 and now around 3. The Institute sees a possible dividend of $2 covered by about 2½ times and returning close to 5% per cent on present levels. It is a situation likely to prove interesting to investors who appraise themselves of the facts about the issue

AUTO DEMAND IS SEEN HOLDING AT GOOD LEVEL

Big Manufacturers Fall Into the Line With Price Cuts

By International News Service

Detroit, June 16—General downward revision of automobile prices continued during the last week with consequent renewed stimulation of a market which is holding unusually strong through months that generally bring a seasonal slump.

Most of the big manufacturers had fallen into line with price cuts [illegible] of the week. Reductions were announced as follows: Graham [illegible] $20 to $50. Chrysler [illegible] to $50. Dodge trucks [illegible] $50. Hudson and Terraplane, [illegible] $50. Hupp sedan models of [illegible] $50.

Ford [illegible] $15 on passenger models and $10 to $20 on trucks. Ford was the only large manufacturer [illegible] price field who [illegible] prices when the [illegible] started.

Leaders of the industry are depending upon the price cuts, aided by a generally favorable business tone, to keep auto production and sales from taking the sharp summer drop which heretofore has been considered a necessary evil.

W. E. Holler, general sales manager of Chevrolet, which reduced prices two weeks ago, reported substantial sales increases directly traceable to the cuts. Chevrolet's June production schedule has been [illegible] sharply over June of last year, calling for approximately 100,000 cars.

"This prompt public reaction," said Holler, "not only means much to Chevrolet, but is also a decided boost for the National Recovery program. The seasonal slump will be felt much less severely this year in the $1 Chevrolet plastic."

Production, according to figures assembled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, appears to be declining, but still ranges far ahead of the industry's output during the corresponding period of 1933.

The N. A. C. C. estimated May output at 236,857 units, 11 per cent below the April total, but 48 per cent higher than a year ago. During the first five months of 1933, the N. A. C. C. estimated, the industry built 1,477,770 units, 88 per cent more than during the first five months of last year.

Studebaker Corporation provided the week's only announcement of [illegible] The South Bend factories will place on the market [illegible] new line of cars without drastic changes from the basic features of the company's present offerings. Details of the new line were not available

New York, June 16—The stock market rose 1 to 2 points today, stimulated by overnight good news of postponement of the threatened steel strikes and the drive to adjourn Congress tonight.

Trading was moderately active at the start but turned dull quickly. Some week-end profit-taking developed in leading issues and held down the rise in the list.

Commodities were better, with corn rising a cent a bushel and cotton 50 cents a bale. Bonds were higher with stocks while the dollar was firm.

Railway sugars and industrials gave the best performance in the market. U. S. Smelting and Dupont rose about 2 points each, American Telephone was up nearly 2 points but other utilities did little.

Steels were aided by the better labor news but gains were largely fractional. Motors were up slightly, largely reflecting the general market improvement. The price situation in the industry was a restraining influence.

The rise which started in the all-very late today carried it to all of U. S. Smelting and Pipe de Pasco continuing to set the pace. Oils continued in demand, particularly the standard. Oil group though gains were small.

Gains running to a point and more were scored in the rails but trading in the carrier group was not active. Freeport Texas and Westinghouse Air Brake were individual weak spots while United Carbon went to a new high for the year. Case Threshing and Sears Roebuck were up a point each in the farm group.

COOK-COOS by Ted Cook

According to Blair Niles, explorer and writer, the modern wife is dull because she doesn't have enough duties.

But there are wives and wives —and some of them without duties make life pretty exciting for husbands.

In fact, nobody can make things quite so exciting as a woman who feels dull.

GEORGE IS ONE IN A MILLION!

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

George Swift, the courthouse janitor, has erected what he calls a lover's retreat across the cement walk in the northeast part of the courthouse yard, under the big shade trees. It is a frame trellis and by the side of it Mr. Swift has set out some honeysuckle vines. Soon the trellis will be a leafy haven, into which local lovers can draw a seat during the fine summer evenings and bill and coo unseen.

Dear, Helpful Aunt Bella:

I am an exceedingly accomplished musician who can play practically any instrument including the piano, the violin, the harp, the banjo and the trumpet. But for some reason I have been banned by the local musical fraternity. Can you imagine? Indignant.

Ans.—Maybe they banjo because they decided too many soups spoil the cook.

NEW FILM TO FOLLOW 'DOWN TO RIO' -:- 'GREAT FLIRTATION,' 'THIN MAN' OPEN

'The Wild Gaucho,' Musical Opus of Lou Brock, Will Reveal Carioca Steps

By JERRY HOFFMAN

Pinch-Hitting for Lonella O. Parsons

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 16—If you haven't seen the carioca by now, better do so immediately in self-defense. Lou Brock is going to fly movie fans down to Rio again in the same pleasant company that made the first flight in his "Flying Down to Rio." A direct sequel to the musical comedy with the same background and cast is being planned by Brock in "The Wild Gaucho," now being written by himself, Cyril Hume and H. H. Hanneman, who furnished the first book.

Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond and Paul Roulien were the principals in "Flying Down to Rio" and Lou intends to reunite them for "The Wild Gaucho." Of course, Dolores now is under contract to the Warners, but I believe she still owes the RKO studios one picture.

Now is Elissa Landi in for it! For the few years she has been in Hollywood, producers have seen her only as the cold and aloof society type. I suppose because they know her mother is a countess. "The Great Flirtation" revealed a Landi Hollywood didn't know existed. She was fiery, temperamental and lovable.

Paramount is offering her a new long term contract with the intention of keeping her that way. "Enter Madame" will give her very much the same character created in "The Great Flirtation." Cary Grant will be costarred with her.

Junior Laemmle is genuinely enthusiastic about Jane Wyatt. He signed her while in New York and feels she is definitely another Margaret Sullavan. In fact, she scored one of her biggest hits when she followed Miss Sullavan in "Dinner at Eight" on the stage. Miss Wyatt will be introduced to movie fans in the title role of "Fanny," which Preston Sturges has adapted from Marcel Pagnol's French play.

* * *

All now is sweetness and light between Ricardo Cortez and the Warners. While the studio is lining up a number of pictures taking Rick out of the heavy class he so despises, Lawrence Schwab is paging him to come to New York. Schwab is about to produce on the stage, "The Maltese Falcon," dramatized by Lauriston Stallings from Dashiell Hammett's story. It was in the leading role on the screen that Rick swept back into popularity. And the Warners are preparing "King of the Ritz," teaming Cortez with Pat O'Brien to precede "Black Ivory."

Chatter in Hollywood

It wouldn't surprise their very close friends to see William Powell and Carole Lombard try it all over again in a few months. Bill never did get over his Lombard trouble and Carole has never denied a permanent soft spot for Bill. Meanwhile, Bill is taking another week on a yacht with Ronald Colman—and if Carole is being seen with Russ Columbo—she always did like singing.

Snapshots of Hollywood

GARY COOPER, MAE WEST, BEBE DANIELS and BEN LYON, ROSZIKA DOLLY and IRVING NETCHER among the latest of the Hollywood celebs rushing to take tables at the benefit for the movie colony's pet charity, the MARION DAVIES clinic, to be held June 25 in the Biltmore Bowl. CHARLES SABIN and MARY HAY rehearsing dance routines to do in the show which already has EDDIE CANTOR, ETHEL MERMAN, JEANETTE MACDONALD as part of the star-studded program for which MARY PICKFORD will be hostess. PATRICIA ELLIS showing up at the studio as a blonde. JOAN BENNETT taking tests for several roles in which she is wanted. LOUISE FAZENDA and HAL WALLIS returning from their European trip July 1. MARGARET LINDSAY and MARLENE DIETRICH heading dinner parties. WALLY BEERY and VICTOR McLAGLEN surrounded by friends at a Hollywood night spot. The GEORGE O'BRIEN'S leaving next week on LARRY KENT'S yacht to cruise in Mexican waters.

Smiling Jack

Joan Crawford

Mr. Oakie smiles here, but in "Murder at the Vanities," now at the Scollay and Modern Theaters, he is a sorely tried screen stage manager.

Muir and Better Blondes

One reason for having seen Jean Muir's face on this page twice in an elapsed seven days, is that, in "A Modern Hero," at the Paramount-Fenway, Miss Muir proves that a new blonde or two always can be preferred. Newer and better blondes, or Muir and better blondes, that is the question!

Joan Stars as 'Sadie McKee'; Stage Show at Orpheum

Entertainment in its fullest measure is offered at Loew's Orpheum Theater this week, where "Sadie McKee," starring Jian Crawford on the screen and showing for the first time downtown, is softered in conjunction with a sparkling stage show headed by Tito Guizar, Radio's Romantic Troubadour.

Miss Crawford, always a vital and glittering personality proves herself a dramtic actress of no mean stature in this new film. As pretty Sadie McKee, authoress Vina Delmar's famous character, Joan is seen as the daughter of a cook in a small town.

Eloping with a cronier who soon deserts her, she finds herself alone and friendless in New York. Her problems, temptations and struggles, before she finds success and happiness, are the problems of the average comely young girl. Supporting Miss Crawford is an all star cast which includes Franchot Tone, Gene Raymond, Esther Ralston, Edward Arnold, Earl Jxford, Jean Dixon and Leo G. Carroll.

Tato Guizar, Radio's Romantic Troubadour, and who accompanied by his "Guitar" tops the scintillating vaudeville program. Mr. Guizar offers a diversified program of current favorites which has made him one of radio's outstanding entertainers.

Closely following him for honors were Joe Morris and Company in a delightful comical and singing skit, "Call It What You Like."

Film Producer Turns Actor

They were looking for someone to impersonate Abraham Lincoln. There seemed to be a scarcity of "Lincolns" in Hollywood when one was needed for a scene in Marion Davies' new Cosmopolitan picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Operator 13." Only two could be found and both were typical of Lincoln's later years.

The search was hopeless. Producer Lucien Hubbard and Director Richard Boleslavsky had several conferences over their dilemma.

Then Producer Hubbard announced:

"I'll play Abraham Lincoln myself. I did it once at a masquerade party, and I can do it again."

Menjou Shines in Met 'Great Flirtation'

Gregory Ratoff, one of whose chief claims to fame before the movies exploited him as a first class dialectition, was the fact that he was Eugenie Leontovich's husband, once wrote a story called "I loved An Actress." Paramount bought it and, under the title of "The Great Flirtation," it is the feature picture at the Metropolitan this week.

Adolphe Menjou, who shares the top billing with Elissa Landi, goes through the picture repenting again and again, "You are not a great actress. You never will be an actress." More's the pity he couldn't convince the lady, for Miss Landi does write fairly good novels in her spare time.

"The Great Flirtation" is all about a great Hungarian actor and his wife who come to this country, are spurned by the Shubert and the other theatrical producers until the little lady, by means of a cute subterfuge, convinces a producer that she is a great Russian star.

The author, the producer and the director fall for her, give her the star role—just like that!—and her husband wins a minor part in the play and—guess what? That's right, on the opening night he steals the show right away from her!

In spite of Miss Landi's shallow performance you'll be inclined to forgive her for she is good to look upon and the picture has its share of good moments. Thanks for them go to such sterling performers as Mr. Menjou, who is fast cementing himself in our affections as a first rate heavy lead, the ever-delightful Lynne Overman, Raymond Walburn and Adrian Roseley.

George Beatty, who looks more like Fabien Sevitzky than Sevitzky does himself, heads a nautical stage show called "Ship Ahoy." George again proves himself a class M. C. and his suave work introduces a series of peppy acts that are sure to please you. Especially a fast-stepping trio of colored hoofers who even had Ruby Keala strutting the while he beat out their infectious rhythms.

Fight Pictures at RKO-Boston

Motion pictures of the Carnera-Baer fight are being shown today at the Keith-Boston Theater. The screen reproduction of the championship battle present clearly every high-pot in the "bloodiest battle of the century," down to the fateful eleventh and Baer's coronation as champion. The fight pictures will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but will not be displaied tomorrow.

Oh! Margie!

They're always thinking of Margie Hart, at the Park Theater, or, so they say. She and a big show come in Monday.

Powell Shows in Hammett Film at State

By HARRIS MORGAN

W. S. Van Dyke, who directed "The Thin Man," current feature at the State Theater, must have assembled all of the hokum situations that clutter up the average Hollywood mystery thriller and thrown them into a convenient ashcan before he started shooting the picture. Then he proceeded to turn out one of the fastest, funniest and most thrilling mystery pictures of the year.

Based on Dashiell Hammett's best seller of several months ago starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, "The Thin Man" is just what the doctor ordered for your entertainment diet. I don't remember when the made the screen adaptation of Hammett's yarn but he or she did a swell job of it — even improved upon it a bit here and there. All William Powell of the nonchalance, the slip and the tingle of Hammett's style has been translated to the screen in a most effective manner.

William Powell was an ideal choice for Nick Charles, the ex-sleuth who comes to New York with his charming young wife for a New Year's binge and gets himself all tangled up, much against his wishes, in a honey of a murder case that involves the dippiest bunch of people you can imagine. Always protesting that this murder business is interfering seriously with his drinking, the most likeable Nick is forced at length to solve the mysterious happenings so that he can go back to the quiet enjoyment of his annual binge.

Myrna Loy, too, is beautifully cast as Nora, Nick's wife. Her poise is so magnificent that it refuses to be shaken even when she is called upon to play a scene with an icebag perched atop her head. Minna Gombell, Nat Pendleton, Porter Hall and William Henry also earn their meed of praise.

If you'll accept our advice you'll trek right up to the State and treat yourself to two hours of first class entertainment. You'll thank us for tipping you off to this screen banquet. And be sure to watch out for the scenes where Myrna Loy takes one of the funniest dogs of the year for a walk along the boulevard.

As though a tip-top feature were not enough, they've got another of those natural colors Walt Disney Silly Symphony that will tickle you, too.

All in all, it looks like a big week at the State.

Seven persons, including three young girls, were injured today, one seriously, when a small touring car returning from Nantasket Beach crashed into a truck unloading food at a chain store in Bridge street, North Weymouth.

The injured were taken to the Weymouth Hospital. They are:

Edward Mahoney, 20, operator of the touring car, of Trapello road, Brighton, suffering from a crushed chest and other injuries, reported to be dying.

Mary Heavy, 20, of Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, broken ankle.

Ruth Stiefel, 18, of Trapello road, Brighton, fractured jaw and broken leg.

Virginia Witol, 19, of Hammatt road, Roslindale, broken leg.

Raife Brown, 18, of Chestwick road, Brighton, Allston, broken nose and cuts about the face.

William Burch, 19, of Chester street, Allston, cuts about the head and face.

John Outatt, 19, of Lester street, Brighton, the seventh passenger in the touring car, was not injured.

Thomas Shaughnessy, a worker at the store, was thrown from the truck and suffered a broken arm. He lives at Dorchester avenue, Dorchester.

The crash occurred during an electrical storm and the visibility due to rain was poor, according to police. The truck, it was reported, was parked at an angle in the street.

Passing motorists assisted police in taking the injured to the hospital. The touring car was demolished and the side of the truck was badly damaged.

'DEATH ROAD' IS PROTESTED

As a result of the death this week of a 10-year-old girl struck down by a taxi-cab on Charles street, West End residents were today forming a committee to call on Mayor Mansfield and demand immediate installation of traffic lights on the thoroughfare which they have named "death highway."

The death of Mary Marshall of Brighton street, West End, occurred as she was returning to her home from the Charlesbank Park near the Charles River. There have been several deaths during the past two years resulting from automobile accidents.

Attorney George J. Leary, president of the Andrew Jackson Club of the West End, Herbert O'Donnell, Abe M. Ecker and Frank Alesi, are leading the fight.

200 JUVENILES TO ENTERTAIN

Popeye and his sailors will eat spinach to music and will exhibit tap dancing surprising even to that tough, hardy salt of the cartoons, when little Louis Perrotte, 10-year-old Chelsea comedian, leads his crew in the 16th annual recital of the Dolan-DePetro Studios, Roxbury, next Wednesday night.

The recital, this year in the form of a pretentious and elaborate musical revue, will have nearly 200 pupils of Gertrude Dolan and Thomas DePetro in the fast-moving cast, and will be staged at the Repertoire Theater in Huntington avenue.

There will be sister teams, brother teams, brother and sister teams, colorful ballets, acrobatic and tap ensembles, novelty solos and many other features.

Paul McNamara, four, and his brother, Billy, six, of Roxbury, another child team popular as entertainers, are in the cast as well as Mary Hennigan, of Jamaica Plain; Claire, Gloria and Virginia Hamel, of Haverhill, and the Whelton sisters, Ruth and Marjorie Ann, of Jamaica Plain.

Answer to yesterday's problem: A, possible; B, impossible.

Have you received your Imps yet? Thousands have got theirs.

But there are still other thousands to be given out free by the Boston Evening American, therefore if you haven't got your Imp yet you should risk your peace of mind and get yours before it is too late.

Imp is a game more fascinating than cross-word puzzles when they were the rage—and the Boston Evening American with one hand held up to ward off blows, offers you the Imps free.

All you need do to get one of these diabolical things is ask your newsboy or your newsdealer. If he hasn't one at the time, merely send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to the Chief Imp, Boston Evening American, 3 Winthrop square, Boston, and one will be mailed to you.

Or, if you wish, you may call at the Circulation Department of the Boston Evening American—same address—and you will be given an Imp free.

The Imps in this free distribution by the Evening American are cardboard puzzles, but if you wish one in colored metal, with the numbers fixed into the puzzle on a sliding device they are on sale in various department and other stores in Greater Boston.

Water Baffles French Vets

By Associated Press.

Paris, June 16—A perfectly good demonstration in protest against war veterans' pension cuts was ruined today by an invasion of municipal water wagons.

Two hundred veterans, mostly legless, had planned to lie down in the square in front of the opera and tie up traffic. Fifteen minutes before if was time to retire they found the square being liberally sprinkled.

Baffled, they paraded to a dry part of the boulevard and sat down for 10 minutes, waving their crutches and canes, then dispersed.

MARY E. CORSON QUINCY BRIDE

Miss Mary Eleanor Corson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Corson, 58 Cedar street, Wollaston, was married to Cornelius J. Driscoll, deputy collector of internal revenue, of 16 Bowditch road, Jamaica Plain, this morning in St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

The Rev. John FitzGerald celebrated the nuptial high mass.

The maid of honor was Miss Anna J. Corson, sister of the bride, and the best man, Timothy J. Driscoll, brother of the bridegroom.

A reception was held at the Knights of Columbus bungalow in Atlantic.

The couple will make their home at Mt. Hope street, Roslindale, following a honeymoon at Atlantic City and Washington.

RE-TRIAL ASKED IN PURSE THEFT

Sentenced to life imprisonment in State's Prison, Charlestown, for the theft of an empty purse, John Ferguson, of Holland avenue, Forest Hills, today sought a new trial in Middlesex court.

Ferguson, who was found to be an habitual criminal by the jury last October and was convicted under the law which makes the maximum sentence mandatory for third offenders, said he was convicted on perjured testimony and that he has unearthed new evidence.

In an affidavit attached to his motion for a new trial, he accuses William Carbone, co-defendant, who pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence, of perjury. Judge Walter L. Collins today continued the hearing to next Saturday.
